POLITICAL NOTES.

—The masters are arming the slaves in Cuba, and we sincerely hope the slaves will use them to disarm their masters.

—The New York World wants a 'national beverage.' But what would become of the Democratic party if its supply of strychnine were cut off?

—"Immigration is Kentucky's great need."—Courier-Journal.

And Bourbonism, which prevents immigration, is Kentucky's great folly.

—The present Legislature of Virginia is said to be the most obtuse body which has assembled in that State since the war. It is also the most Democratic.

—The exciting topic in Baltimore, just now, is, shall the city absorb the whole of Baltimore county? An election by the people to decide the question will be held in May.

—A number of ex-rebel leaders are still bothering their heads about what killed the Southern Confederacy. It died of an overdose of blue pills administered by Uncle Sam.

—An Eastern Democratic paper makes an urgent plea for "education in politics." We second the motion. But how, in that event, will the Democratic party find supporters?

—The Legislature of North Carolina has just passed a law which imprisons for five years, "any person who manufactures or deals in spirituous liquors as a drink, of any name or kind, containing foreign properties or ingredients poisonous to the system."

—We have at length discovered the reason why a certain class of newspapers style themselves "independent." It is because they persistently flout all the demands of political honesty, and are thoroughly "independent" of all the restraints of fact and the requirements of truth.

—The Boston Post is of opinion that if "the bummers and thieves who now infest the Republican party" were driven off that organization would be left in a minority. So? These, then, are the elements on which that journal and the party whose exponent it is, rely mainly for their future majorities.

—It is a little singular that the opposition press has as yet invented no putative white father for the noble eulogy on Sumner, last week delivered in Boston by Elliot, the colored Congressman from South Carolina. And yet it was marked by the very highest gifts of eloquence and graces of intellectual culture.

—The ex-King of Spain, poor young AMADEUS, according to a work just published in England, did not understand the Spanish people; he resolved upon improving them, and they did not wish to be improved. This is not at all to be wondered at. The Bourbons of the United States manifest an exactly similar spirit of disinclination for self-advancement.

—Every body predicted that as soon the Congress should show a majority for inflation, stocks would take an upward bound and a wild era of speculation would follow. And yet it appears that stock, instead of advancing, have in many instances actually declined, and still continue to exhibit a downward tendency. How do the alarmists account for this?

—Speaking of the Democratic nomination for the Mayoralty of Albany, New York, the Argus of that city naively observes: 'We do not urge that our candidate, as an individual, is entitled to support'—from which it may be inferred that if his Satanic majesty were to be regularly and duly nominated after the approved party methods of that organization, the Argus would support him on general principles.

—Since the adoption of the Massachusetts State Constitution, in 1780, there have been at least five instances in which the Lieutenant Governor of the State has succeeded to the Gubernatorial chair, by the death or resignation of the Governor. The first was in 1793, when Governor Hancock died, and was succeeded by Lieutenant Governor Samuel Adams, and the last is the succession of Lieutenant Governor Talbot by the election of Governor Washburne to the United States Senate.

FALSEHOOD IS MIGHTY, AND WILL PREVAIL—WITH THE WATCHMAN.

THE Tuten REPUBLICAN is pleased with Orvis' selection as additional law judge, and admits that there is no man on its side of the house who has brains enough to fill the position.—Watchman.

We are pleased with the appointment of Judge Orvis, but the feeble effort the Watchman makes to crow over the appointment is a suggestive noise. It suggests that the Watchman has been relieved of an antagonist, who, unlike a great many democrats in this county, was not afraid to assert his right to run for office whenever he wanted to; that the Watchman did not carry the democratic party in a convenient pocket; that the Watchman is glad to bury the hatchet. And well it may be—for the strength of that party for some time back has been centering in a wing that has Fred Kurtz' Reporter for its organ, and which, in the last two general primary elections, has laid out the Watchman wing—cold and harmless. Any casual reader of that paper could not fail to notice during the last two years, that the support given to Orvis as a democratic candidate for office, was the unmistakable left-handed kind of support. We were pleased because the quarrel was gradually working the overthrow of democratic rule in the county, and it did in a measure culminate last fall, in the election of a republican commissioner. The Watchman may well feign a sickly show of pleasure at Judge Orvis' appointment. Wait till the fall campaign comes on, and mark our prediction that the Watchman influence will be brought heavily to bear to give the delegates of this county to some other man.

While we have a number of lawyers on the republican side, who are eminently qualified for the additional Judgeship, we know that the announced policy of Governor Hartranft would entirely preclude such an appointment, and therefore without any hesitation stated candidly that we believed Mr. Orvis to be the best man on the democratic side. Here is just where the Watchman differs from us—it don't, but can't help the matter! We can name a number of republican lawyers here in Bellefonte—among them A. O. Furst, Esq., and Gen. James A. Beaver,—but neither of these gentlemen would give up their lucrative practice, to serve as a judge for a few months, when there was no shade of chance for an election next fall. The Governor has nominated republicans to be judges in all districts where there is a possibility of their being elected next fall, and has nominated democrats in districts that always give a democratic majority. We believe this policy to be just and liberal, because in every democratic district in the state we believe there can be found (as in the case of this district,) one honest and competent democratic lawyer.

But there is one part of the proceedure that is most contemptable. By some feat of skill or masterly generalship Mr. Orvis' nomination to the Senate was promptly confirmed, an action that has not been had in the case of a single republican whose name was sent by the governor to the Senate. We suppose Judge Orvis was nominated because he belonged to the minority, and was a member of the Legislature. After his nomination the democracy held a caucus and passed a resolution pledging the party to oppose all confirmations, unless the republicans would make some concessions on the Apportionment Bill. They have no objection to the men nominated by the governor, but demand certain political advantages as their price for voting to confirm them. This the majority declined to do.

Under the constitution, all appointments made by the Governor, have to be confirmed by two thirds of the Senate, and under this requirement, twelve democratic senators can reject all nominations. On the question of confirmation, senators sit as judges, and the only question should be as to the fitness of the nominee. In Adams, Lebanon, Mercer and other counties, court was to have been commenced on last Monday, but the nominations were not confirmed, and on account of twelve stubborn senators court was adjourned in several of the above counties, until party lash resolutions shall have been removed. Now it is plain to see how Judge Orvis slipped into his appointment so early in the game. Still we are not ungenerous enough to wish that his appointment had not been confirmed until after the democratic senator had shown their hand.

The Pittsburg Commercial speaking on this same subject says:

Every man of sense can see that the party has committed the grossest blunder in taking this course. The nomination of Orvis, a Democratic member of the House, was thought by all reflecting men to be very doubtful legality. He was a member of the Legislature which created the very place he was nominated to, and it is a really grave and and serious question whether he was not constitutionally ineligible. Yet, doubtful as was his case, the Democrats accepted the situation, consented to his confirmation, and raised no question on the subject; but when it comes to the case of men about whom there is, and can be, no question, they reluctantly hang back, and refuse to consent. No political party in Pennsylvania ever voluntarily placed itself in such a humiliating position before.

THE THREE TAILORS OF TOOLEY STREET.

If Cyrus W. Field and his confrers in their recent visit to the President on the subject of his duty in the matter of the national finances had gone no further than to resolve that they were the people of the United States, their conduct might have become as proverbial as that of the Tailors of Tooley Street, but when they added to their ridiculous performance the assumption of a right to tell the President what he should and should not do, in the premises, their conduct became impudent and offensive to the whole people.

It is high time that these self-constituted advisers of the administration should be snubbed even more severely than the President snubbed Field, for their growth of impertinence seems to be surpassed by nothing save their own selfishness. Their excuse for intermeddling on this occasion, for they presented no argument of justification, was based upon a deep solicitude for what European nations would think if the President should sign the Senate bill.—The President no doubt knows, certainly the people of the United States begin to see, that there is a very considerable class of middle men, resident in the eastern cities, whose interests are much more deeply interested in the welfare, success and good opinion of the people of Europe than of those of our own country. The value of this advice may be reckoned from the local of their sympathies.

A TRAGIC INCIDENT OF THE CRUSADE.—The Boston Advertiser gives the following account of the sudden death of a saloon keeper from excitement at a visit from a praying party:

The temperance question is receiving a great deal of attention in East Douglass at present. On Fast day a union mass meeting was held, and a committee of ladies and gentlemen appointed to wait on the liquor dealers. On Saturday the ladies called upon one of the principal saloons, the proprietor, Mr. L. Simpson, having refused to see the gentlemen, and were received very politely. He was asked if he thought it right to sell liquors, he responded, "Yes, as right as for grocers to sell groceries." One of the ladies then read several passages from the Bible, remarking, "Let us see what the Lord says." On hearing the Scriptures relating to the anger of the Lord with drunkards and those who sell liquor, the proprietor turned pale, trembled violently, and clutched the counter convulsively for support. The many loungers in the saloon were stupefied, and only offered assistance when urged by the ladies. On being led into another room he cried, several times, "O God! have mercy on my soul!" Immediately his tongue began swelling, filling his mouth to such an extent as to render it impossible to articulate. The ladies did all in their power to render him comfortable, and a physician was sent for who, on arriving, pronounced it a case of apoplexy, and in a short time the man died. The community was of course startled with the news, and the feeling for Mrs. Simpson is intense. The ladies all agreed that it was the direct work of the Lord, and even some of the frequenters of the saloon acquiesced in this decision.

THE discussion in Congress last week, brought out some interesting facts with regard to Seal fisheries in Alaska. The discussion was had in connection with a resolution for the appointment of a commissioner or special agent to explore the Aluntian Islands and main-land of Alaska, to study the habits of the fur-bearing Seal and ascertain if they can be captured in any other places except the two islands which the Government has leased to the Alaska Fur Seal Company. This company was formed by two men of New York, but the franchise has since passed into the hands of European Jews, whose places of business are in Hamburg, London and Frankfort.

By the terms of the contract the United States Government receives $50,000 a year for the rental of the two islands and a royalty of $2.00 on every skin, and the number which they are allowed to take in one year is limited to 100,000. The United States keep an agent on the islands, to see that the terms of the contract are fulfilled. The skins are first shipped to San Francisco and thence to London, where by a process which is a secret in the company, they are prepared for the market.

The belief is entertained by Congress, that the company is violating the terms of the contract by taking a larger number of seals than is therein specified. One Congressman who has recently visited London, stated that he believed the number annually caught would exceed three hundred thousand, in which case the Government is defrauded out of $400,000 in addition to the danger that, with this wholesale slaughter, the animals may soon become extinct.

The only other place in the world where these animals are found is at a small island in Russia, and this produces only about ten thousand annually. By a careful examination of the chief markets where fur seal skins are sold, the fraud, if it exists, can readily be detected. The profits of the company are simply enormous. Provided they keep within the limits of the contract as to the annual number of animals taken, each skin costs them $2.50. To this must be added the expense of taking, transporting, curing and marketing, but this is only a tithe of the amount which is realized from their sale.

Three skins are sufficient to make a lady's suit, and the price of such a suit in New York ranges from $250 to $1,000, according to quality. With such enormous profits, of course the temptation to swindle the Government is very great, and the Shylocks of Europe have no conscientious scruples on the subject.

The monopoly is a gigantic one, and if the company has violated the terms of their contract, our Government would most certainly be justified in terminating it. If it is allowed to continue, not only does the Government lose an important revenue which is justly its due, but the source is liable soon to be cut off, by the extermination of the fur-bearing seal from such an indiscriminate slaughter.

OBITUARY.

REV. B. S. SCHNECK, D. D.

Rev. B. S. Schneck, D. D., a prominent minister of the German Reformed Church, died at his residence in Chambersburg, on Saturday evening last, after a brief illness. He was a brother of Mrs. Henry Keller of Boalsburg and well known in this county several years ago. He was a gentleman of a very high order of culture, had travelled extensively abroad, and was eminent as a writer. His contributions were frequent to the journals of his Church, and his last important production was a most able but dispassionate presentation of the objections to what is known as Mercersburg Theology. As a citizen he filled the full measure of a Christain gentleman, and his life was as unpretending as it was ceaseless in efforts to do good to others. His genial companionship in social life, his remarkable intelligence, his rare modesty, and his blameless Christain example, endeared him to all who new him, and created a wide circle of people of every faith to mourn his death.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

MONDAY.

SENATE.—No business beyond the passage or first reading of nearly forty bills and the introduction of a half a dozen new ones was transacted.

HOUSE.—After a short debate and a rejection of a motion to go into Committee of the whole for a special amendment, the Senate bill providing for the incorporation and regulation of private corporations was passed finally.

TUESDAY.

SENATE.—Mr. Graham introduced an act requiring the admission of children of six years of age into the common schools without regard to color. The act to provide for insane persons charged with crime failed. Mr. Rutan introduced an act authorizing the Secretary and Deputy Secretary of the Commonwealth to administer oaths.

HOUSE.—The House resumed consideration of bills on third reading and passed the following finally: An act regulating the tax on the franchises of mining corporations; act relating to affidavits of defence; act empowering courts to vacate roads laid out thirty years and not opened; act relative to burial grounds in incorporated boroughs; act relating to estates of decedents; act providing for the construction of sewers by and in incorporated boroughs; act to repeal the act to prohibit the issuing of licenses in the borough of Braddock in the county of Allegheny, approved the 9th of April, 1870.

WEDNESDAY.

SENATE.—The bill to regulate the organization and management of banking institutions came up and passed third reading. The bill contains a section prohibiting all banks organized under this bill from paying interest on deposits. Mr. White called up his bill appropriating $15,000 to the Indianna Normal School. Messrs Graham, Warfel and Anderson, of Allegheny, opposed it, and the amount on motion of Mr. McKinley, was reduced to $10,000. The bill then passed second reading.

HOUSE.—The House Committee of Ways and Means reported a resolution for final adjournment on May 15th. Motions to make it May 8th, and May 7th, were voted down and the resolution was passed. The vote on the bill for admitting insane criminals into the lunatic hospitals, was reconsidered, and the bill passed. The following bills also passed finally, and were sent to the Senate. Relating to the accounts of the several county officers of the Commonwealth. An act to fix the salaries of county officers in counties containing over one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants. The bill to increase the homestead exemption from $300 to $500, and otherwise amending the exemption law, especially so as to prevent waiver of exemption, were strongly fought, but passed [illegible]

THURSDAY.

SENATE.—Mr. Rutan offered an act to authorize the Auditor General and State Treasurer to settle all outstanding claims for work done and material furnished for the Constitutional Convention. Also, an act authorizing the Governor to appoint a commission of seven to report amendments to the new Constitution to the next Legislature. Mr. Anderson reported, as committed the act to repeal all laws requiring school boards to maintain separate schools for the exclusive tuition of children of color. The new Constitution requires a two-third vote of Senators elected (22) to confirm any nomination made by the Gov., and when several nominations came before the Senate this morning, the Democracts refused to vote on the nominations, consequently the nominations were not confirmed. The Democrats by this act add another laurel to their wreaths of virtue and magnanimity! Mr. Orvis received the unanimous vote of the Republicans and to them the Democratic party is indebted for his confirmation, and now, having received his confirmation, they attempt to coerce the Republicans into giving them certain advantages in the Apportionment bill by refusing to vote for Republican nominees. This meanness and ingratitude is characteristic of the party and instead of gaining them favors will work to their disadvantage. At the afternoon session, a communication from the Governor was read, announcing the reappointment or additional Law Judges and President judges rejected this morning for want of a two-third vote. Laid over, under the rules, for five days.

FRIDAY.

SENATE.—The Senate passed a number of bills up to second reading, and adjourned over.

HOUSE.—The House resumed the consideration of bills of first reading not reached on Tuesday. Things went along very quietly until twelve o'clock, when Mr. Toner, of Westmoreland, moved to reconsider House bill, No. 238, which allows distillers and brewers to sell liquors by the quantity. The provisions of the bill virtually repeals the Local Option law. This call had the effect of waking the House from its lethargy. They made almost unanimous call on the Chair, some one way and another, but all anxious to be heard. Mr. Webb got in his motion to indefinitely postpone, which was lost—47 to 46. Next Wednesday was the day fixed as the day for its consideration. The afternoon session was spent in reading bills in place and receiving reports from committees. At five o'clock the House adjourned until Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

——We take the following from the Clarion Republican. Perhaps it will apply as well to the girls of Bellefonte—we do not know though, as we have not been watching them much of late; but we are certain that they will be fully up to the fashions, whether it is a "Dolly Varden" or whatever it may be:

The 'Dolly Varden,' 'Grecian Bend,' 'Kangaroo Limp' and other oddities and eccentricities of fashion have departed and are being superceded by the 'Straighten-up-Mary-Jane and-show-your-breast-pin' attitude. The girls of Clarion, like those of all other places, unanimously exclaim, 'O-h! a-i-n'-t i-t n-i-c-e?'

STATE ITEMS.

—The Peninsula at Erie is to be sold by the Sheriff.

—Oxford has a new weekly paper, called the Republican.

—Maunch Chunk is to open another first class hotel, May 1st.

—Ridgeway is to have a new and handsome Lutheran church edifice.

—A Grand German festival takes place at Pottsville, May 9, 10 and 11.

—Seven young hoodlums have been arrested in Erie for insulting ladies on the street.

—Franklin brags of more tobacco stores than any city of its size in the State except Bellefonte.

—A painter, in Easton, went to sleep in the midst of a drunken bout, and never woke again.

—A careless nurse in Bedford dropped a new born infant on the floor, the other day, breaking the child's arm.

—Tin cans filled with beer and buried tubs of potatoes, are now delivered at numerous houses in Williamsport each morning.

—The Chester County Agricultural Society has decided to have a fair trial of mowers during the coming haying season.

—Companies are being formed in Scranton for the purpose of securing cheaper and better tenements for the working class.

—Mrs. Bridget Moran died in St. Clair, Schuylkill county, on Monday, from an overdose of laudanum, taken to relieve pain.

—A canal steamboat is to ply between Harrisburg and Middletown during the summer for the accommodation of picnic parties.

—Isaac Love was run over by a coal train at Swedes Furnace, Berks county, on Sunday, and instantly killed. He was nineteen years old.

—Cowden the Corry shoemaker who was arrested for allowing his wife to starve to death has been discharged from custody by the coroner.

—The Scranton Republican says that a colony of one hundred Catholic families are making preparations to move westward from that vicinity.

—Jamison a noted billiardist of Scranton died in the poorhouse in that city last week. Moral, if you want to die rich you must not play billiards.

—The new work of the Valentine Iron Company at Williamsport are progressing toward completion, they include a rolling mill, charcoal furnace, etc.

—The spotted fever (cerebro-spinal meningitis) is raging among the children in Barry township, Schuylkill county, many deaths being reported.

—The Bedford Inquirer says that "a misfortune has befallen Beaver county," and then goes on to tell about the establishment of a new paper in Beaver.

—Edward Trimbath, master miner in the Springfield mines, Blair county, fell down an ore shaft on Saturday last, dashing out his brains and killing him instantly.

—At Excelsior, Northumberland county, on Monday last, Pat Gribbin shot his brother-in-law, John Keating, in a dispute at the supper table. Whiskey caused the fight.

—Saari Tagai, a Japanese gentlemen, is in Titusville, where he proposes to remain for several months, for the purpose of becoming acquainted with the method of refining petroleum.

—Peter Herdic, of Williamsport, offered a prize of $5,000 to any fire company which would save his mills from destruction during the great conflagation on last Sunday. The Independent company accepted the offer, saved the property and got the money.

—A monthly publication, entitled The Phonetic Magazine, will be printed in Tyrone, commencing about the first of July next, by W. George Waring, provided a sufficient number of pledges of supscription can be secured to warrant of the success of the enterprise.

—A watchman in the employ of the Deleware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company watched every night for fourteen years and four months, from six in the evening to six in the morning, without fail, thus making 5,232 nights without sleeping (it is to be presumed) in the night time.

—Two belligerent colored females had a fisticuff in the African M. E. church in Bedford, on last Sunday night, which broke up the services. There was an old quarrel between the two, which was brought to a "head" by one of the parties taking the other's seat on the occasion mentioned. A number of lawsuits will grow out of the matter.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

EDITOR BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN.—Dear Sir:—In behalf of The American Sunday School Union and the Centre County S. S. Association, please allow me space in your paper to express my sincere thanks for contributions received during the past year, from Bellefonte and Centre county, for the cause of Sunday School missions in this section of our State.

Considering the extreme difficulty that all have experienced in obtaining funds for any purpose, the offerings for this object have been unexpectedly liberal.

All contributions are duly acknowledged. Copies of a summary report of work for the year are sent to all contributors and other interested persons.

Poetry.

BATTLE OF THE CRUSADE.

BY MRS. EMILY J. BUGBEE.

On the plains of bloodless battle, they are gathering true and strong,
All the hero-hearted women, who have wept in silence long,
At the terrible oncoming of this raven-winged wrong,
Now God is leading on.
Chorus: Glory, Glory, Hallelujah, etc.

They have rallied forth to conquor, and will never beat retreat,
While the banner of the rum-field is still flaunted on the street,
And his hellish snares are waiting for the all-unwary feet,
For God will lead them on.

They will pierce the bending heavens with united prayers and cries,
Till the strongholds shall be shaken, and the foe defeated lies,
Who has slain his many thousand of the strong ones and the wise,
For God will lead them on.

The have looked to law's enforcement for the help that never came,
Now God hath surely kindled in their hearts undying flame,
And relying on his Spirit, they shall conquor in his name,
For He is leading on.

For the future of their dear ones, for their country's power and pride,
Onward moved by bitter memories of the past, whose pains abide,
They are working, weeping, praying, in their weakness side by side,
For God is leading on.

Be still O tongue of caviler, be strong O heart of fear,
See you not the cloudy piller that is ever hovering near,
Know you not an ear is open that will not refuse to hear!
For God is leading on.

O the beauty and the blessing when the curse is swept away
That has turned to midnight darkness so many a golden day
And is throwing weary shadows over many a life-long way,
For Christ is coming near.

All the desert and the wilderness shall blossom with the flowers
Of industry and plenty, in this blessed land of ours,
And the grace of God unstinted shall come down in gentle showers.
For heaven will be begun.

A SNAKE IN THE GLASS.

Come, listen awhile to me, my lad,
Come listen to me for a spell!
Let that terrible drum
For a moment be dumb,
For your uncle is going to tell
What befel
A youth who loved liquor too well.

A clever young man was he, my lad,
And with beauty uncommonly blessed,
Ere with brandy and wine
He began to decline
And behaved like a person possessed;
I protest
The temperance plan is the best.

One evening he went to the tavern, my lad,
He went to the tavern one night,
And drinking too much
Rum, brandy, and such,
The chap got exceedingly "tight,"
And was quite
What your aunt would entitle a "fright."

'Tis a horrible slumber he takes—
He trembles with fear,
And acts very queer,
My eyes! how he shivers and shakes
When he wakes,
And raves about horrid great snakes!

'Tis a warning to you and to me, my lad!
A particular caution to all,
Though no one can see
The viper, but he—
To hear the poor lunatic bawl,
"How they crawl
All over the floor and wall!"

Next morning he took to his bed, my lad,
Next morning he took to his bed,
And he never got up
To dine or to sup,
Though properly physicked and bled;
And I read
Next day the poor fellow was dead!

You've heard of the snake in the grass, my lad,
Of the viper concealed in the grass;
But now you must know,
Men's deadlies foe
Is a snake of a different class!
Alas!
'Tis a viper that looks in the Glass!

Our Story Teller.

A GOOD NAME.

BY MRS. H. G. ROWE.

'Nothing? Is the meal all gone?'

'Every spoonful. I used the last for breakfast this morning, and now I don't even know where the children's dinner is to come from.'

The words were spoken in a dry, husky tone, and the mother glanced with a look almost of apathy at the tearful faces of her little ones who, frightened at her pale face and ominous words, had gathered about her in terrified silence, while her eldest son, a sturdy lad of twelve, replied cheerily:

'Never mind, mother, we're in a tight place, I know, but I guess we shall find a way out somehow.—S'posin' you send Tommy over to Mis' Hamblin's an borrow a few potatoes for the children's dinner, an' I'll go right down to the corner an' see if I can't find somethin' to do, so I can bring home enough to last us over Sunday.'

It had cost the boy no little effort to speak in that brave, hopeful fashion, for, with a mind matured and sharpened by an early acquaintance with poverty and want, the poor fellow lacked much of that unreasoning hopefulness that seems so natural to a happy childhood, while the many rebuffs that he had already met with in his applications for work had long ago taught him the sad truth of the saying, that the father's sins shall be visited upon the children, and none knew better then he the bitter sense of ignominy that haunts the drunkard's child from the cradle to the grave.

But his hopeful words were not without their reward, for the mother's rigid face softened, and a tear rolled over her faded cheek as she said in a more natural tone:

'You're right, Dan; and perhaps Mis' Hamblin'll let me do some sewing or knitting for her to pay for them. And if you do find something to do—'

'We'll have some nice, hot ginger cake for supper,' interrupted little Bessie, whose idea of supreme felicity might be expressed in very few words: 'new shoes and hot ginger cake,' but the pretty face was suddenly overclouded at seven-year-old Tommy's stern comment:

'How foolish you talk, Bessie! Just as if we could afford ginger cake, when you know we have to eat our Johnny cake bare, an'—'

Dan laughed, and even something like a smile glanced for a moment across the mother's face, but she only said, in her habitual tone of forced calmness, while with one toil-hardened hand she patted caressingly the golden head that nestled among the folds of her faded calico dress like some bright-hued autumn flower smiling out from its limp and frost-bitten surroundings:

'My little girl shall have the best we can get for her. She shan't suffer if mother can help it.'

And, strong in her maternal love, the long-suffering woman once more bowed her patient shoulders to the burden that but an hour since, had seemed too heavy for her woman's nature to endure longer.

'Get your basket, Tommy, an' come along with me as far as Hamblin's, said Dan, adding, as the little fellow drew his worn cap down over his ears, and buttoned the only remaining button of his ragged jacket, preparatory to starting, 'you'd better get Bessie to lend you her mittens. The sun shines warm, but the air's as sharp as a knife; I 'most froze my fingers pickin' up wood this forenoon.'

As Tommy turned to follow his brother's suggestion, Mrs. Milton remarked hesitatingly, while a faint flush of shame—shame for another's sake—crept across her sallow cheek:

'Your father has had work all the week, and perhaps he may think to get something for us to eat to-morrow.'

'Perhaps—he may.'

There was nothing peculiar in the words or tone, and the bitterly incredulous smile that accompanied them was hidden from his mother's sight by the folds of the old comforter that he had wound about his neck, but as they tramped down the snowy path little Tommy looked up with his blue eyes full of childish wonderment, while he asked curiously:

'What makes you stamp through the snow so, Dan? You act just as if you wanted to smash up everything.'

Dan paused a moment in his fierce tramp with a half-ashamed laughed as he replied evasively, 'If I didn't walk pretty hard with this old boots all out a the toes, I guess I should 'a known how frozen feet felt before this time.'

Tommy laughed. He was a sunny-tempered little fellow, and even frozen feet seemed to him a rather a funny thing than otherwise just then, for were they not sure of plenty of backed potatoes and salt for dinner, with a fair prospect of something better still from the proceeds of Dan's prospective earnings, and—

But here, for the first time, a doubt suddenly insinuated itself, and sidling up a little nearer, he asked confidentially:

'What are you goin' to do, Dan?'

'Can't tell—something, I guess.'

But poor little Tommy's bright face had grown suddenly grave, as all at once he remembered the many bitter disappointments that Dan had already met with while searching for work, and the probabilities of his success on this occasion seemed startlingly few, even to the hopeful-hearted child.

'I do so hope you will, Dan.'

And oh, how frequently Dan's own heart echoed the hope as he watched the childish figure that, shivering in its thin, insufficient clothing, trudged soberly up the lane that led to the Hamblin farmhouse, and realized that in case of his failure to find employment, the pangs of hunger must be added to the list of sufferings with which the drunkard's family were already but too familiar.

The clock was just upon the stroke of twelve, which being Mr. Jared Skinner's dinner hour, that worthy had already commenced his preparations for the important ceremony by carefully locking his money drawer, and having deposited the key in a safe place, was leisurely drawing on the initiatory sleeve of his overcoat, when a voice at the door arrested his attention and his arm in the same moment, and the outstretched limb remained stationary for an instant while its owner glanced with ill concealed impatience at the boyish figure in the doorway.

'Well, what do you want?'

There was a contemptuous harshness in his tone, and the boy's weather-bronzed face grew a shade redder at the implied insult, but there was too much at stake for him to take note of trifles now, and he replied with all the coolness that he could muster:

'I see you've got a load o' wood in your back yard. Want me to get it in for you?'

The storekeeper frowned suspiciously:

'What are you prowlin' 'round my back yard for?' he growled. 'If I ketch you up to any o' yer thievin' tricks I'll—'

He shook his head threateningly, and the boy's temper for a moment got the better of his prudence:

'I ain't a thief an' you know it!' he began impetuously; but at that instant a thought of those helpless, hungry ones at home crossed his mind, love conquered anger, and he added, with an air of forced composure, 'If you'll let me have the job I'll do it cheap an' well.'

Mr. Skinner was leisurely adjusting himself to the comfortable wadded intricaties of his overcoat, and vouchsafed no reply to the boy, whose anxious heart throbbed and swelled almost to suffocation as he stood there in the dingy light that, falling through the dusty, cobwebbed windows made dreary still by the array of dirty barrels, casks and boxes, the usual background of a country variety store, doubly dreary to the waiting boy as he remembered that somewhere in the midst of that unsavory mass was stored the subtile poison that had wrecked his father's life, and reduced his once happy family to shame, proverty and starvation.

The storekeeper drew on his warm fur mittens, gave a parting look at the desk with its heavy padlock, and its row of leathern bound ledgers, as if to be sure that all was right, then advanced toward the door, apparently unconscious of the presence of his boyish visitor who, now fairly desperate, again ventured to interrupt the great man's meditations:

'Mr. Skinner, will you let me have the job?'

The man stopped suddenly, and a gleam of low cunning lighted up, for an instant, his somewhat stolid face:

'Yes,' he said, with an odd sort of smile that sent a thrill of vague apprehension of the listener's heart.

'Yes, you may get the wood in if you want to, and I'll give you fifty cents for the job.'

'Thank you. I'll go right about it now.'

Dan's face was all aglow with grateful joy, but Mr. Skinner deigned neither word nor look to his twice-repeated thanks, as locking the door carefully behind him he hurried home to the dinner that the lad's unwelcome importunity had forced him so unwillingly to defer.

However welcome the task, it was no light one for the half-clothed, half-fed boy; and as the afternoon waned it is no wonder that the heavy, ice-coated logs grew heavier and heavier to his weak, boyish arms, while his mittenless hands were so benumbed with the cold that he did not feel the wound made by a sharp splinter, although the snowy logs grew crimson beneath this touch, while a dull, heavy faintness crept over him, and he staggered beneath his burden as he dragged the heavy logs, one by one, down the broad rollway into the cellar beneath.

'Oh, look here, Mirandy! Here's one of those Milton boys getting in our wood.'

And little Ella Skinner, perched up at the kitchen window, looked down with childish curiosity upon the toiling boy whose wretched condition, instead of awakening her sympathy, seemed rather to amuse her, for she added, laughing:

'See how ragged his jacket is, and—do look! why, his toes are sticking right out of his boots. What a looking creature he is!'

'Mirandy' looked out, as requested, and her broad, honest face grew pitiful as she watched the shivering boy.

'I can't stand that, no how!' she exclaimed energetically, as, in trying to lift a heavy log, he lost his balance and fell heavily forward in the snow. 'I'll give that boy a chance to warm himself and recruit a little before he gets the rest of that wood in.'

And in a moment more the tired, half-frozen lad found himself comfortably seated by the kitchen fire, while the kind-hearted woman bound up his wounded hand, and regaled him with doughnuts and a bowl of hot ginger tea.

'Now you drink it all, every drop' she urged, for, somewhat abashed at Miss Ella's curious scrutiny, he had put aside the bowl half drained, and as he obeyed, his new friend added, in a sympathizing tone:

'You'll feel enough better for gettin nicely warmed, to make up for the time you've lost.'

'Yes, indeed, I shall work twice as fast after this. The fact is, I didn't know how cold I was till I got into this warm room.'

And Dan looked gratefully into the kind face that was watching him with a look of peculiar interest.

'Your name's Milton, ain't it? What's yer father's given name—Harrison?'

'Yes'm.'

And Dan looked curious.

'I thought likely. I used to know yer father when we was children, for we both went to the same school when old master Oakman kept. I shan't never forget what the old gentleman said to us once, (he was a master-hand for readin' character,) and yer father, and Jared Skinner and I was in the same class together, and we'd been trying hard to see which should get to the head, and says he, 'You're all smart in yer way, an' I'll ventur' to say you'll all do well, but 'twon't be in the same line. Here's Jared now, 'll be rich—there ain't no kind o' doubt o' that, for he'll have money, by hook or crook, somehow; and Mirandy 'll be like Solomon's virtuous woman—a prudent house-wife, and a faithful spouse; but Harrison 'll be best of all, for he 'll leave a name behind him that his children 'll be proud of.'

She did not see the hot flush of shame that mantled the boy's cheek as she spoke, and she added with a good-natured laugh:

'Jared's come out about as he said, but here am I, a homeless old maid, doin' house-work for other folks; and as for your father, I ain't never heard of anything remarkable that he's done yet.'

The blow, though cruel, was unintentional; for having been for years a stranger to her native town, the kind-hearted spinster had not, since her return, chanced to hear the sad story of her old school-fellow's intemperance.

And Dan went back to his work, warmed, fed, and with new strength that made the remainder of his task comparatively light, but all the time, as if in bitter mockery, sounded in his ears the prophecy of the partial old teacher: 'A name that his children will be proud of.' And hot, blinding tears, tears of mingled shame and sorrow, bedimmed his eyes as he thought how sadly that prophecy had missed of its fulfilliment.

'Does he remember it I wonder?' was the thought that crossed his mind, as he dragged the last stick down the rollway, while with a sigh of satisfaction he turned away from the completed task, and with the half-muttered words: 'Now I'm ready for my pay; the children won't have to go to bed hungry to-night, that's sure,' he trudged hopefully away over the crisp, frozen snow in the direction of the "store," whose lighted windows looked out upon him with a friendly gleam that carried with it a promise of good cheer that not even the dingy room, with its hot, close atmosphere reeking with the fumes of tobacco and whisky, the crop of shabby loafers about the stove, or even the hard, harsh face of the proprietor himself could entirely dissipate.

Glancing furtively at the noisy topers, Dan saw, with a feeling of relief, that his father was not among them, and stepping up to the counter, he waited a moment, expecting that the storekeeper would notice him; but as that personage still continued apparently oblivious of his presence, he ventured a modest reminder:

'I've got the wood all in, Mr. Skinner.'

'Ah! Well, all right, then.'

And without even glancing at the waiting lad, the speaker busied himself in packing away a box of herring, whose appetizing odor made the boy's mouth water, and he asked eagerly:

'How much are them fish a piece?'

'Two cents.'

'Then, I'll take half a dozen of 'em, and the rest in Indian meal.'

'The rest of what?'

And there was a malicious gleam in the man's eye that Dan saw and trembled before.

'The rest of the pay for my afternoon's work,' he said, stoutly, but with a sudden sinking at his heart, while the storekeeper laughed contemptuously.

'I hope you didn't think,' he sneered, 'at I'd be fool enough to pay you for a little job like that when your father's owin' me what he is. I'll credit him with fifty cents,' turning over the leaves of a ledger as he spoke. 'It's the only way I'll ever get a cent of my pay out of 'im.

Dan stood for a moment, silent, stunned by this terrible and unlooked for disappointment, while the big tears gathered slowly in his eyes and his lips twitched convulsively; but as he was about turning away in hopeless silence, his ear caught the half-muttered comment of one of the lookers-on, a bloated, ragged old fellow who, with his chair tipped back against the counter, and his feet restling composedly upon a big pile of salt codfish, remarked, with drunken gravity, between his puffs of tobacco smoke: 'That's the talk! We c'n leave our debts to our young 'uns, if we can't leave em' nothin' else.' His words were like a spark to powder; and the boy turned, suddenly confronted his employer with clenched hands and flashing eyes:

'And what is his debt for?' he demanded, in a tone which startled the drunken loungers from their apathy, and brought an angry flush to the storekeeper's stolid face.

'It ain't for clo'es an' food for his sufferin', half-starved family, let me tell you. It's for what has made him forget that he's a man, and put into your pocket the money that ought to have clothed an' fed his cold an' hungry children.'

A subdued murmur of sympathy ran round the room, which was instantly checked by Mr. Skinner's angry retort:

'Clear out, you impudent dog! or I'll kick you out. What business is it of mine, I'd like to know, if your father chooses to make a fool of himself? I ain't his guardian.'

In his fierce excitement Dan had forgotten everything but his own and his family's wrongs, but with the reaction came an overwhelming sense of his utter helplessness to right these wrongs, that his boyish nature so keenly realized; and drawing his shabby cap lower over his brows, he turned away with the muttered but still defiant words: 'You'll get your pay for this sometime, in a way you won't like.'

The door closed with a clang, and the store-keeper laughed uneasely:

'Smart pup, that!' he sneered, with a sidelong glance at his shabby auditors, none of whom volunteered any remark, while he added with an air at once confidential and candid:

'I'm as sorry as anybody to see Has Milton going to the dogs as he is, but it ain't my fault if he will neglect his family, and disgrace'—

He stopped suddenly and his listeners looked with startled, wondering eyes at a figure that has been lying unobserved upon a heap of bags in a dark corner of the store, but had now risen to its feet, disclosing the haggard, worn face of Milton himself.

But there was now none of the stupidity of intoxication on that face as, stern and pale, it confronted the abashed liquor dealer, whose usual coolness seemed all at once to have deserted him, for he changed color and fumbled nervously with the string of a package that he held in his hand.

'Jared Skinner!' and the speaker's voice sounded hollow and far away, while the gaunt, thin hand that rested upon the counter trembled with nervous agitation, 'you remember me as I once was,—look at me now, a misserable beggarly wreck, a burden to myself, a shame to my family, and an object of contempt to the man who has held out to me the intoxicating cup that he knew I had not the strength to refuse.'

The other was evidently embarassed and ill at ease, but assuming an air of careless, good-natured indifference, he said banteringly: 'Come, come; Milton! your'e blue—here'—pouring out a glass of the tempting poison and pushing it towards him—'is something to raise your spirits, and make you feel as rich as the king on this throne.'

There was a moment of silence as, lifting the glass in his trembling hand, the tempted man looked longingly at the sparkling beverage whose subtile poison seemed already to penetrate to every fiber of his body; then, suddenly, glass and contents fell with a crash upon the floor at his feet, and in a voice that his old mates scarcely recognized, so full was it of a new strength and determination, he exclaimed energetically:

'I've drank my last glass,—so help me God!'

Then, as if suddenly disenthralled by the boldly spoken pledge, he added hopefully: 'I've a week's wages to begin my new life with,' and, turning to the frowning and discomfited dealer, he added, in a lower key: 'I'll pay my own debt to you yet, Jared, so you won't need to take any more of my poor boy's earnings towards it.'

There was a quiet but intense scorn in the words, that even Jared Skinner could feel, and for once in his life he had the manliness to feel heartily ashamed of himself.

It was a long and weary walk home that night for poor Dan; a walk that he never forgot. Tired, cold, and hungry as he was, the sharp, bitter sense of his own helplessness and humiliation was ever uppermost, dulling and making him at times almost unconscious of his bodily discomforts, as he plodded drearily along, with only the cold, far away stars for company, and the crisp, white waste of snow stretching out on either hand, silent, pulseless, like a broad winding sheet above the earth's frozen heart.

He had, almost unconsciously, taken the longest way home, for there was something so terrible to him in the thought of his mother's disappointment and the hungry children's tears, that he shrank from the meeting with a fear that prompted him to defer the dreaded moment as long as possible.

'Perhaps they'll be abed, if I don't hurry,' he thought, and clinging to this forlorn hope he loitered aimlessly along the scarcely trodden path, slapping his bare hands or thrusting them into his pockets to keep them from freezing, stamping his cold feet, and rubbing his ears till they burned.

But put off the dreaded time as he might, it came at last, and for the first time in his life, Dan saw the cheerful light gleaming from the windows of his humble home without that feeling of restful satisfaction that all the discomforts and privations that he had suffered beneath its roof had not as yet had the power to prevent.

He paused for a moment upon the treshhold, and as he heard from within the sound from his little sister's merry laugh, his boyish courage gave way entirely, and sitting down upon the snow-covered step he hid his face in his hand and sobbed aloud: 'She won't laugh when she has heard my story, poor little thing!'

But what is that? It is no child's voice, and starting up from his seat, with a smothered exclamation, Dan pushed open the door and saw a sight that sent such a thrill of glad surprise to his heart that he half doubted, for a moment, the evidence of his own eyes. Sitting by his own fireside, sober and with a look of quiet enjoyment upon his face, was the long estranged husband and father. Little Bessie, perched upon his knee, was nestling cosily against his breast, while Tommy, sitting upon the braided hearth-rug at his feet, watched contentedly his mother's cooking operations, as, with a hopeful smile once more illumining her long hopeless face, she glided in her quiet fashion from cupboard to pantry, trying, with true womanly tact, to make the most of her humble store of crockery and table-linen, to do all honor to the glad occasion.

Little Bessie sprang up, as her brother entered, exclaiming joyfully: 'Oh, Dan! father's come home to supper, an' brought lots of good things, an' mother's bakin' some ginger cake an' biscuit.'

The boy looked eagerly into his father's face, and perhaps it was something he read there that emboldened him to speak out the thoughts that had lain so heavy upon his heart through all those weary hours of discouragement and doubt. 'Oh father!' and the young face seemed to have, all at once, grown strangely mature with its expression of almost painful earnestness: 'Won't you try to do what your old school-master said you would, leave a name to your children that they can be proud of?'

He stopped suddenly, half frightened at his own boldness, but he was reassured by the hearty grasp of his father's hand, and the tearfully spoken, sweetly spoken words:

'Yes, my boy, with God's help, I will henceforth live so that, while redeeming the past, I shall be preparing, for those I love, that goodliest of all heritages, a good and honorable name.'

And he kept his word.

The Temperance Work goes Bravely on.

What work is it! People may criticise it, or scoff at it, or say that it amounts to nothing, and that it will yield no permanently good results. Those who are not fond of prayer, may speak vehemently against the right of women to occupy the sidewalks for the purpose of religious exercises. Sympathizers with the liquor business may complain of the sufferings of tavern keepers whose premises have been invaded by the devotional and aggressive women. Doubters may sneer at the conversion of the men who have abandoned the business of selling strong drinks; and insist that the converts will "fall from grace" as soon as the enthusiasm subsides. Pledges signed by reforming drunkards may be objects of suspicion; and neighbors who have known old topers for a series of years, and watched their persistently bibulous habits, may laugh at the idea that such persons can be changed into valuable promoters of the Temperence Cause.

Nevertheless the work goes on, as temperence work has not for a generation or more, gone in this country. Call it fasination, or worse names; but the religious people of the land are heartily at it, and they have taken hold of it in a way that indicates their intention to keep at it.

There is a deep seated feeling among the great mass of Christian people, that the cause of drunkenness has had its way in the land long enough. Our country is rotten with it to such an extent, both in high places and low places, as to cause alarm for the future. The nation is as drunk as it can be, to keep on its feet; and it must be steadied, or fall. The liquor interest has grown, till it is one of the chief controlling influences in our political affairs. If it grows much more we are hopelessly ruined.

There has been, in recent years, a great deal of empty and idle talk, on the tempance question. It has not been all empty or idle all through. Despite the windy haranguing of men who had nothing to say, despite the vapid stuff which passed in many quarters for temperance literature, much of the talking and the writing has made its mark off the community. The community is now educated up to the point at which mere talk is in but slender demand, and aggressive work takes its place.

So now for the work. It has always been a leading difficulty in the holding temperance meetings, that drinking people and sellers of drink would not come to them. It seemed impossible to reach these people, and they were the very ones to influence, for whom was the object of the meetings. Another difficulty has been that many a temperance speaker, fired with enthusiasm by the wickedness of the traffic in strong drink, has dealt in abuse, rather than argument; in vituperation, rather than oratory. The change of base in the present operations is one of the most hopeful elements of success. Instead of abuse, persuasion comes to the front; instead of anger, the spirit of Christian prayer; instead of loud-voiced denunciation, the comparatively gentle message of personal feminine influence. The result is apparent.

The work has its infirmation. Let us not be disappointed if the efforts of a few weeks or months are not crowned with complete success. Let us not despair, even if a few of the best men of the country shake their heads at it. Let us not drown ourselves in tears, because of opposition where we had expected help It is God's work and God will see it through in his own way and time.

A Child's Faith.

Last year (writes a Pennsylvania minister,) coming from Pittsburg East in a sleeping car, my apartment was next to that occupied by a gentleman, his wife, and their little daughter, perhaps four years old. The lady was excessively timid and nervous. The Horse Shoe Curve seemed to be her special terror; and my sleep, and, I presume, that of others, was disturbed by her talking to her husband of the peril. The engineer might be a sleep, or the switch-tender might be a sleep, and then the train would certainly be plunged down the abyss.

But it was worth the while to be awake when I heard the sweet rebuke, not intended, but real, of the little one: "Ma, God takes care of us; and does God sleep?" Was not this the ordaining of strength out of the mouth of babes?

PERUVIAN AN IRON TONIC SYRUP

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing* Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

COSMOLINE

COSMOLINE is the concentrated extract of the healing properties of Petroleum, which are known. It is the most bland and soothing remedy ever used; beside possessing more healing power than any substance or compound ever prepared. It is for almost all the daily casualties which occur in household, the workshop, or on the farm, as well as for many of the diseases which afflict humanity.

FOR BURNS AND SCALDS

It is invaluable, cooling and soothing the injured parts at once, and producing a perfect cure in a very short time, without leaving any scars. For this purpose alone, it is

A BLESSING TO THE WORLD

FOR FROSTED LIMBS, COSMOLINE is fully as efficacious as for burns and scalds, restoring a healthy action to the injured parts very quickly. It is also the best possible remedy for Chilblains and Chapped Hands.

FOR RHEUMATISM especially Inflammatory, most forms of NEURALGIA, swelling of Limbs or Glands, COSMOLINE affords in the shortest possible time the HAPPIEST RELIEF.

On CUTS AND BRUISES, the action of COSMOLINE is almost magical. If promptly applied, it prevents sorencss, and the wounds heal very rapidly.

FOR PILES, it has proved to be an unequalled remedy, and many a sufferer has blessed the day of its introduction.

FOR SKIN DISEASES we can recommend it with the greatest confidence, especially for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema etc., and Teething humours.

We might go on enumerating the many other conditions for which it is unequalled, but will only add that wherever there is inflammation from any cause, COSMOLINE brings a rapid and happy relief, and will be the dependence under all circumstances. COSMOLINE is Prescribed by the best physicians, both allopathic and homeopathic. It is but nature's own production, brought into an agreeable and pleasant condition, and is as safe to use anywhere as fresh cream.

ELAINE

AS AN ILLUMINATOR.

WHY IT IS THE SAFEST.

ELAINE will not explode while burning in a lamp, nor in any other way, as it does not contain any of the explosive compounds so frequently met with in the ordinary oil for illuminating. A lamp, filled with ELAINE, if upset or accidently broken, will not explode or burn. There is no position in which you can put a lamp filled with ELAINE, for common use, in which it will explode. As no other illuminator has such advantages of safety, ELAINE IS CERTAINLY THE SAFEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL KNOWN.

A MASSACHUSETTS SENATOR.

William B. Washburne Elected on the Thirty-third Ballot.

At a meeting of Dawes men, before the session opened at two o'clock, a ballot for candidates other than Dawes resulted in 36 votes for Dr. Loring and 14 for Washburne, a part of which were for Emery Washburne, and part for Governor Washburne ; the rest were scattering. Judge Bennett, of Taunton, receiving some votes. During the recess, a communication was received from the Dawes men, proposing a union on the name of Dr. Loring, which was rejected by the Hoar men by an almost unanimous vote. Another proposition was received from the Dawes men, that the Hoar men should pass a resolution complimentary to Dawes, and the Dawes men would then withdraw his name ; they also proposed that but one more ballot should be taken today and convention then adjourn to Saturday. Both these propositions were voted down. Sprague, of Framingham, moved that the Hoar men should stick to Judge Hoar, but finally withdrew the motion.

The 33d and final ballot was taken when the convention assembled after recess. Mr. Sodman, of Boston, moved to proceed at once to ballot, which was carried, and the roll was called. After the roll was first called, there began an immediate change of votes, which lasted nearly half an hour, all of them in favor of Governor Washburne. The result was as follows : Whole number of votes 267 ; necessary to a choice, 134; William B. Washburne, 151; Curtis, 64; Dawes, 26; Adams, 15; Loring, 4; Banks, 4; Wendell Phillips, 1; Stevens N. Gifford, 1; John G. Whittier, 1. The president stated that it appeared that William B. Washburne was chosen Senator, and declared the convention adjourned.

This result will give general satisfaction. Governor Washburne is a man of much more than average ability, with considerable experience in the details of legislation; of tried nerve, possessing positive convictions, civil courage, political disinterestedness and aggressive virtue. Gov. Washburne was not a seeker of the office, nor is he a man of merely negative sort. He has some peculiarities of manner, but is dowered with those qualities of mind and spirit which are, perhaps, specially requisite to the times. The soundness of his Republicanism is unquestioned, and the upper branch of the National Legislature will suffer no derogation, either in character or dignity, from his accession to the chair of Senator Sumner.

NEW YORK CITY is threatened with another "strike." It is a very curious fact that every spring brings its inevitable strike. The very class that during a long winter are complaining that no employment is to be had, throw away the boon when offered, unless their own conditions are granted. The threatened strike will, if it occurs, react with severity on the class it is claimed to benefit. The idleness of summer is a poor preparation of for winter's exigencies, and the extraordinary benevolence of last season will not be repeated.

From the Press.

EFFECTS OF THE FIRE AT WILLIAMSPORT.

We have received from Mr. W. H. Lippincott, the well-known wholesale lumber merchant of this city, the following circular of Messrs. Wm. H. Gratwick & Co., the leading lumber dealers of Albany, N. Y. which very clearly and succinctly states the condition and prospects of the lumber business :

OFFICE OF WM. H. GRATWICK & CO.,
ALBANY. April 3, 1874.

DEAR SIR : At this season of the year it is customary for all who are interested in the lumber trade to ask "What are the prospects ?"

It has been our custom for a few years past to present to the trade the condition of affairs as we have viewed it, and as we have received this year so many inquires, we beg to submit the following general views :

The winter for logging has been most unfavorable at all points. To recall its character in your own locality will give you a correct idea of how it has been elsewhere, and we think all will acknowledge that if logs were drawn at all it must have been on nearly bare ground. The intention of lumbermen was to put in not more than one-quarter of the usual stock, but even this has not been one-half realized, and it is conceded on all sides that less logs have been put in this season than during any winter for the last ten. True, the stock of old logs left over from 1873 was much larger than usual, but when we see, as at present, the price of sawing one dollar per thousand below last year, we make up our mind that this, with mill-men (who should be the best judges in this matter), means a short supply for their mills. This year, at least, they are willing to act as they talk. In addition to this there is great doubt about the running of the logs, as what little snow fell has almost entirely disappeared, and every day of this dry weather wastes the water now in streams, and makes necessary a very large amount of rain for log-driving. Again, streams swollen by rain rise and fall quickly, and this is not as desirable as the greater steadiness given by the melting snow. Log-running has not yet commenced to any extent, and the prospect for it to-day is certainly anything but promising. Sharp, freezing nights and thawing days, like the last few weeks, will never run logs, but will waste the snow and water.

Quite a large amount of manufactured stock was held over at manufacturing points, but it is nearly all of at coarse grade and will not suit the Eastern trade. Clear lumber is very scarce and firm, and most continue so during the season. The product of the Saginaw river in 1873 did not give more than ten per cent of upper qualities, and it must be less in 1874.

Manufacturers are quite confident of an advancing market this year, and we find good evidence of their sincerity in the refusal of many of them to sell more than one-third or one-half their season's cut at present prices.

And this feeling is not entertained by manufacturers alone! There seems to be a general impression that lumber must improve as the season advances, and while the trade in Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Williamsport, and other large markets is at present unusually brisk—far exceeding that of a year ago—a still livelier trade is confidently expected.

On the whole, we think this season promises well for lumbermen, and our candid opinion is, after hearing from and visiting many of the principal markets, that while the spring months may not show their usual activity in certain markets, the trade of the year will be unusually healthy, and prices firm with an advancing tendency throughout.

Very respectfully, yours
WM. H. GARTWICK & Co.

DEATH OF REV. JOHN TONNER. D. D., —The following from the Canton, O., Repository and Republican will be read with interest :

It becomes our painful duty to announce the death of Rev. John Tonner, D. D., at his residence in this city, on the 1st inst., at the age of 62 years.

The death of Dr. Tonner is a dispensation of Providence that will be felt in social, religious and business circles in a marked degree. He was a self-made man, of a wide range of attainments and culture, whose career, having its salutary lesson for those who survive him, is worthy of more than a passing notice.

Dr. Tonner was born in Centre county, Pa., in 1812. His father was a farmer, and he got only a meagre education, even for those days. But he improved his opportunities to the fullest extent and became, himself, a teacher at an early age. At the age of twenty he was married to Lydia Kreamer. His wife, and family of six daughters and one son, are left to mourn his loss.

In the same year in which he was married he was converted and commenced to preach. He has, ever since, been a local preacher of the M. E. church, leading a most devout and rigorously consistent christain life.

That he must have been a man of unusual popularity, we infer from the fact that, in his native county he was five times elected to the important office of Register, Recorder, and Clerk of the Orphan's Court, serving in that capacity fifteen years. Subsequently, in 1863, he came to Canton, and became the Secretary of the incorporation of C. Aultman & Co., which important post he held and filled with signal ability until his death.

While this brief outline indicates how most of his life was employed, it leaves much to be said of the intellectual and moral qualities which made him a man of influence and prominence as a citizen. Chief among these was his firmness, his unwavering purpose. This self-will, supported by the power of concentrating his intellectual forces, forces that had been armed and equipped for action by a wide range of research continued through many years, made him a man of power. He chose to use that power as an advocate for the right and an obstacle against the wrong. Added to these qualities he was a man of promptitude and precision rarely met with. In his lecture on 'Little Things,' delivered here and elsewhere, he delineated his own character for care and exactness most completely. With him no detail of life was so small that its functions were not required to subserve their entire positive and relative purpose.

Few men of prominence within our knowledge had more friends and fewer enemies. Though a keen observer of events, and of positive, almost arbitrary will, he had such self-control, that in pursuing the even tenor of his way he silenced men without offending them, and securly held, even unto the end, the esteem of those with whom he differed. He was zealous and confident, but not bigoted ; aggressive, but not dogmatic ; a leader and not a follower in the line of battle. Such a man, training his daily walk into entire accord with christain requirements, must be respected, as the deceased was, generally and unreservedly.

The death of a prominent member of society, endowed with so many excellent qualities is a loss to be deplored, but it is the severance of the bond which bound him in tenderest relations as the kindest and most indulgent of husbands and fathers, that weighs most heavily. To those thus bereaved the public heart offers profoundest sympathy in their great affliction.

THE STATE COLLEGE.—We have always held to the principle that no young college or university will ever attain to a favorable standing among long established institutions of the kind, until men eminent in their professions and of recognized ability, are found to fill the chairs. The history of the college in this county is a proof of this statement. With the reverend Dr. Pugh, at its head, it rose to the level of the best colleges in the country, but after his untimely death, several years elapsed which worked an era, that, if forgotten now, would not be detrimental. Dr. James Calder, has administered the duties of President with an ability that has inspired the public with confidence and which is gradually but surely tending toward solid and permanent success. He has selected a faculty, that would make any college succeed. Among the number we mention with pleasure the name of Prof. Collier, whose lecture before the last county institute was so much admired. The United Presbyterian of Pittsburgh speaks as follows of a lecture delivered by this gentleman before a large body of Allegheny county teachers, week before last :

The other of the two referred to was Prof. Collier of the Agricultural College of this State. This gentleman had with him a most excellent apparatus for the illustration of several highly interesting lectures on chemistry. In no instance did I witness the least failure in his experiment. In not a few instances they were exceedingly brilliant and striking, and were, I am sure, witnessed with delight by his numerous spectators, and must contribute not a little to the interest of the teachers and such of their pupils who were permitted to see them.

Apart from the illustrations which the Professor gave us, he was most happy as a lecturer. His voice was clear, his utterance deliberate, and his definitions concise and lucid.

It was exceedingly gratifying to find this gentleman, perfectly familiar as he seemed to be with nature and her laws, and enthusiastically devoted to the study of these, not only recognizing from time to time the doctrine of an intelligent First Cause to which nature with all her laws and phenomena must be ultimately referred, but protesting in plain and strong language against the idea of overlooking and ignoring this fundamental truth to which we are conducted by reason and revelation. While admitting that the scientist, as such, has to do with the facts of nature, and with these alone, yet let him not, in the contemplation of these facts, forget that he is a man as well as a scientist. In the spirit of humble dependence upon the infinite God, and with a feeling of devout adoration for his glorious perfections as displayed both in his work and word, Prof. Collier would have these teachers instruct their pupils.

—The following is the report of Elder's school, Half Moon township, for month ending April 9 : Emanuel H. Harnden, Mida B. Lever, Anna M. Gray, Carrie R. Hunter, Elmer S. Harnden, John A. Hunter, Calvin R. Elder, Melville B. Lever, Harry L. Wilson and Edmond C. Elder, were present every day during month. Anna M. Gray and Harry L. Wilson were present every day during term. Whole No. in attendance, males 19, females 18; average attendance, males 16, females 15 ; per cent. of attendance, males 84, females 83.—Each of the following pupils missed the number of words set opposite their names, during the term, in spelling :—Blanche Lever, 4 ; Alice S. Gray, 8 ; Esther E. Hunter, 7, and R. McKinney 1. Anna M. Gray received the most number of head-marks in B or second spelling class, Wallace R. Hunter, in C or third spelling class, and Melville B. Lever in D or fourth spelling class.—There is some excellent drawing by a few pupils, which I have in my possession to show to any one who may desire to see it.

E. A. GARBRICK, Teacher.

Suggestions to Those Intending to Advertise in Newspapers.

Select an article for which there is a popular demand, or for which you have good reasons for believing you can create such demand.

Be sure it possesses intrinsic merit and value, and is really what you attend to assure the public it is. It is a mistake to suppose that advertising will sell a worthless article any length of time. The public may be induced to give it a trial, but will speedily drop it, to your cost.

Feel your way carefully at first, so as to satisfy yourself that you are not mistaken in supposing that you have a good thing, which the public will buy at a profit to yourself.

When these points are satisfactorily settled, the money you expend in judicious newspaper advertising is as certain to pay you as any investment you can make. The experience of successful advertisers has demonstrated this over and over.

Don't advertise stingily. Better keep out of the newspapers altogether than spend just enough to pay for tucking your advertisments away out of sight. A good many men expend their ingenuity in contriving how they can get an advertisement into a newspaper so it will escape notice, and call it economy. This is like painting half the figures of your business number on your sign.

Keep up your stroke. The public know when an advertiser is timid and half scared and when he means business, and believes in himself and his goods, and will act accordingly. Many an advertiser misses a near-at-hand success by quitting too soon. The public won't rush in and buy you out the first day ; it has other things to think of.—Some will read your announcement and buy at once ; others will glance at it one week, read it the next, and buy the third; others will be haunted by it till they are at last obliged to look you up to ease their minds, and you are meanwhile making your name and business familiar to thousands who will come to you some time. Pay no attention to a silly notion, encouraged chiefly by people who have got to be prosperous, that it is not quite the thing to push your business through the newspapers. It is just as legitimate as putting up a sign over your door, and more modest than sending out drummers to worry people into trading with you, for your newspaper advertisement addresses no one in particular, and whoever buys your goods in consequence of it really does so without your asking.

SIMON GIRTY, THE "WHITE SAVAGE."

In the stirring times of the Old Pioneers, no name on the whole border was so widely known or so universally dreaded as that of Simon Girty, "The White Savage," as called by Heckewelder. From 1778, when Girty, Elliott, McKee, and other well known tories fled to the Indians from Fort Pitt (now Pittsburgh), down to 1794, when the power of the Ohio tribes was forever crushed by "Mad Anthony Wayne," scarce a maroud, massacre, or scalping raid occurred but what the Girtys—for there were three brothers of them, all operating with the western Indians—were at the bottom of them. The hated name was a terror in every borderer's cabin, and its mere mention would cause women's cheeks to blanch, and children's hair to stand with fear.

Charles McKnight, Editor of the Illustrated Peoples Monthly of Pittsburgh, and author of "Old Fort Duquesne, or Captain Jack, the Scout,"—said by Bancroft, Stone. De Haas, and other competent critics, to be the truest Historical Novel ever written," and by all odds the best border book since the days of Cooper—has just commenced in the Monthly, a thrilling and intensely interesting Historical Serial, called "Simon Girty, the Renegade." The time selected is 1782, when the whole frontier was ruthlessly scourged by the savages, backed by tory and British leaders, embracing the Moravian massacre on the Muskingum : Crawford's horrid torture at the Sandusky towns; the second siege of Ft. Henry, (Wheeling); the burning of Hannahstown, and the terrible battle of the Blue Licks, Ky.

Truly a stirring and bloody period, when such Indian trackers and slayers as Boone, Kenton, the Poes, and the Wetzels smote the savages "hip and thigh." The Peoples Monthly is now in its fourth year ; is the only illustrated paper of any pretensions west of New York ; is so popular from Maine to Texas that eight out of ten renew, and is the best, cheapest and most elegant illustrated paper for the home published anywhere. Subscription Price, $1.50 per year ; or a three months trial for only 25 cents. Agents wanted everywhere on Monthly, and "Old Fort Duquesne." Address, "Peoples Monthly Publishing Co." Pittsburgh, Pa., for circulars and sample copy.

"HOUSEKEEPER" OF HEALTH.

The liver being the great depurating or blood cleansing organ of the system set this great "housekeeper of health" at work, and the corruptions which gender in the blood, and rot out as it were the machinery of life, are gradually expelled, from the system For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with very small daily doses of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are preeminently the articles needed. They cure every kind of humor from the worst scrofula to the common pimple blotch or eruption. Great eating ulcers kindly heal led under their mighty curative influence. Virulent blood poisons that lurk in the system are by them robbed of their terrors, and by their persevering and somewhat protracted use the most tainted systems may be completely renovated an built up anew. Enlarged glands, tumors and swellings dwindle away and disappear under the influence of these great resolvents.

DOCTORS COULDN'T HELP HIM.

MEIGSVILLE, Morgan Co., O., Mar. 24th, 1872.
Dear Dr. PIERCE :

When I was 12 or 13 years of age I took what is called King's Evil, and by constant doctoring it would heal in one place and break out in another. It also broke out in my left ear. I first found your name in the 'Christian Advocate," and sent 18 miles for the first bottle, which did me more good than all the other medicines I ever took. I am 24 years old and doctored with five doctors, and not one of them helped me so much as your bottle of Discovery. I have got well and able to do a good day's work.

JOHN A. WILSON.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

—The Republic magazine for April sustains its reputation for candor in the treatment of public questions. Every farmer should read the article entitled, "Has the Government neglected the Interest of the Farmer ?" It is full of wholesome advice and valuable information. "Whither are we Drifting ?" contains many plain facts in relation to the situation in Texas. "The Department of State" gives a clear view of the inside machinery of Mr. Fish's diplomatic stronghold. "Cutting down Appropriations" is a sensible article, just and considerate in its tone, and offers suggestions which might with profit be adopted by our statesmen at the Capital. No man or woman, interested in national affairs, should not fail to subscribe for this valuable magazine. Send $2.00 to the Republic Publishing Company, Washington D. C.

"Cover them over with Beautiful Flowers."

by Stewart, is a New Quartette for Decoration Day. The sentiment embraced in the celebration is a beautiful one, and the Quartette named is certainly, both in words and music, wedded to the occasion. Everybody who loved the brave boys, and cherishes the memory of our fallen heroes, will want to hear the song, and as it is now in full rehersal wherever the day is honored—"Cover them over with beautiful flowers" will become very popular. It can be had at all Music Stores for 30 cents, or will be mailed for the amount by the publishers, LEE & WALKER, Philadelphia.

—We have received the May number of the St. Nicholas, an illustrated magazine for boys and girls, and the very best of its kind that we know of. It is published by Scribner & Co., No. 654 Broadway, New York. We make the following extract from its pages :

THE BIGGEST FLOWER IN THE WORLD.

On some of the East India islands, where so many queer things grow, is found a flower that measures a full yard across. Yet it has only a cup-like centre, and five broad, thick, fleshy petals. Seen from a distance, through the dark-green leaves of the vines among which it grows, the rich wine-tint of the flower, flecked with spots of a lighter shade, is said to impart a warmth and brilliance of color to the whole surrounding scene. But the nearer the observer comes—all eagerness to see more closely so wonderful a flower—the less does he like it. Not that the color is less beautiful; but who cares for beauty in human beings when its possessor is malicious, disdainful or untruthful ? and who cares for beauty in a flower, when the oder is disagreeable ?

So notwithstanding its proudly brilliant color, and its great size, the rafflesia-arnoldia will never be admired, for we are told that its "odor is intolerable, polluting the atmosphere for many feet around." Another bad trait of its flower, character is, that it is too lazy to support itself, but lives upon the labors of others. In the forests where it is found, there are many vines, sometimes climbing the trunk of trees, and sometimes trailing along the ground. Fastening itself to a vine in the latter position, the unprincipled rafflesia grows without other trouble to itself than to draw for its own use, the nutriment which the industrious vine-roots are all the while collecting from the earth. The vine must be very amiable, you think ? Ah! but the poor vine cannot help itself. It cannot shake off the big, selfish flower, and can only work harder than ever to collect supplies sufficient to nourish the hanger-on, and have enough in addition, for its own branches and leaves.—St. Nicholas for May.

—Locke's National Monthly for May is issued in advance of some of its more pretentious colleagues, and the publishers assure us that hereafter it will be mailed to subscribers so that all may receive it as early as any other of the popular magazines. The contents of the present number present a remarkable range and variety of matter, and save that the magazine seldom contains long serials, the matter will compare favorably with that of older publications. Mr. D. R. Locke (Nasby) contributes to the present number one of his entertaining sketches on "The Danger of Naming Children after Great Men ;" Richard Grant furnishes an excellent Western story under the title of "The Affable Stranger ;" J. B. Battelle ("Hugh R Elton") gives his experience in "A Spanish Castle ;" and Ann Clymer writes the history of "A Month's Engineering" in a style both novel and piquant. Among the graver articles are "The African El Dorado," by Mrs. Rosa L. Segur; "The Iniquities of Justice," by Thomas W. Knox ; and "The House Martins as Builders," by Henry J. Slack. Poems are contributed by Maria Coffinberry, Mary Hartwell, and Mrs. Sarah D. Hobart, while the young people are remembered in a charming juvenile story called "Gertrude's Bargain." The National Monthly is mailed at only One Dollar a year ; single copies ten cents. LOCKE & JONES, Publishers, Toledo, Ohio.

—We have also received the number of "La Creme de la Creme," a collection of music for advanced players and contained in the present number, the following pieces, worth all together in sheet form $2,00. "Mountain Stream," "Count On Me," "Graziasa," "Dancing Leaves," "May Breezes." The subscription price of this valuable Musical Monthly is $4,00 a year ; single numbers fifty cents. Address J. L. Peters, 599 Broadway, New York.

—"The Technologist" for April has come replete with useful and instructive reading matter. It also contains twenty cuts and engravings. This is a valuable work for Manufacturers, Mechanics, Builders, Inventors, Engineers and Architects. Issued by The Industrial Publishing Company, 176 Broadway, New York, and may be obtained from any News Dealer.

GREAT DISCOVERY!

E. F. KUNKEL'S BITTER WINE of IRON For the cure of weak stomach, general debility Indigestion, diseases of the nervous system, constipaton acidity of the stomach, and all cases requiring a tonic.

The wine includes the most agreeable and efficient salt of Iron we possess ; Citrate of Magnetic Oxide, combined with the most energetic of vegetable tonics, Yellow Peruvian Bark.

The effect in many cases of debility, loss of appetite, and general prostration, of an efficient Salt of Iron combined with our valuable Nerve, is most happy. It augments the appetite raises the pulse, takes off muscular flabbiness, removes the pallor debility, and gives a florid vigor to the countenance.

Do you want something to strengthen you ? Do you want a good appetite ? Do you want to build up your constitution ? Do you want to feel well ? Do you want to get rid of nervousness ? Do you want energy ? Do you want to sleep well ? Do you want brisk and vigorous feelings ? If you do, try Kunkel's Wine of Iron.

This truly valuable tonic has been so thoroughly tested by all classes of the community, that it is now deemed indispensible as a Tonic medicine. It costs but little, purifies the blood and gives tone to the stomach, renovates the the system and prolongs life.

I now only ask a trial of this valuable Tonic. Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, Philadelphia, Pa.

Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere.

CAUTION TO PURCHASERS OF THE PERUVIAN SYRUP (a protected solution of the protoxide of iron). Beware of being deceived by any of the preparations of Peruvian Bark or Bark and Iron, which may be offered to you Every bottle of genuine has Peruvian Syrup (not Peruvian Bark) blown in the glass. EXAMINE THE BOTTLE BEFORE PURCHASING.

Oppression after eating, headache, nervous debility, are the effects of indigestion. One or two at most, of PARSONS Purgative Pills will give immediate relief.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment may be administered to children with perfect success, in cases of croup, whooping cough, influenza, and almost any of the diseases to which they are liable.

SATURATE A PIECE OF BREAD OF MEAT with gastric juice, and it will dissolve. This is digestion. Add to such a mixture a little alcohol, and it will not dissolve. This is indigestion.—Beware, then, of tinctures, or tonics, or decoctions containing spirituous liquors. Shun all rum "tonics," and rely solely on DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, the finest digestive invigorant known, and free from the fiery curse of Alcohol. 15-4w

Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope. Price six cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally ; Piles, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits ; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., author of the "Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in the admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

☞ This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

COURT PROCLAMATION.

Whereas the Hon. Charles A. Mayer, President of the court of common Pleas, in the 25th Judicial District, consisting of the counties of Centre, Clinton, and Clearfield, and the Honorable W. W. Love and the Honorable Henry Dopp, Associate Judges, in Centre county, having issued their precept, bearing date the 11th day of March, A. D. 1874, to me directed for holding a court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery and Quarter Sessions of the Peace in Bellefonte, for the county of Centre, and to commence on the 4th Monday of April next, being the 27th day of April, 1874 and to continue two weeks.

Notice is hereby given to the Coroner, Justices of the Peace, Alderman and Constables of said county of Centre, that they be then and there in their proper persons, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, with their records, inquisitions, examinations, and their own remembrances, to do those things which to their office appertains to be done, and those who are bound in recognizances to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the jail of Centre county, be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.

Given under my hand, at Bellefonte, the 11th day of Mar. in the year of our Lord, 1874, and in the ninety-eighth year of the Independence of the United States.

T. S. ARTHUR'S

NEW AND GREAT TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN BOOK!

Woman to the Rescue!

A STORY OF "THE NEW CRUSADE!"

PRICE, $1.25.

JUST PUBLISHED, AND FOR SALE

By Agents all over the Country.

This new story by Mr. Arthur tells in a rapid and stirring narrative how in an American town of five thousand inhabitants, the women organized their forces, moved upon their common enemy with a courage and impetuosity that demoralized him at the first outset, and drove him out in less than a week.

No one can read this new book without being startled and aroused by its stern portrayal of the helpless and hopeless condition of our towns and cities under the rule of a Rum Dynasty.

No one can read it without seeing how utterly man has failed in his efforts to overthrow this Dynasty, which robs and exhausts the people with a cruel and insatiate greed more ruthless than that of any of the robber knights in the middle ages.

No one can read it without feeling that in this new and wonderful uprising of the women, God is working for the overthow of intemperance by new and subtile forces, against which the old defences of a "traffic," which has cursed the people with untold miseries, crumble and fall like barriers of sand.

No one can read it without a profound respect and sympathy for the heart-breaking women, who, despairing of help in man, are now crying mightily to God all over the land

Its wide circulation will help the cause immensely, and aid in giving to the new movement a character and strength that will make it well nigh irresistible.

AGENTS WANTED in all parts of the country, with whom most liberal terms will be made. Ladies and gentlemen wanting profitable employment, apply at once.

COMPLETE OUTFIT embracing a perfect copy of the book will be mailed, post paid, on receipt of $1.00, and choice of territory awarded.

Agricultural.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this department of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

ONLY A FAMER'S DAUGHTER.

"She's only a farmer's daughter,"
A stylish lady said,
With a scornful glance of her handsome eyes,
And a toss of her haughty head.

Her hands, that sparkle with many a ring,
Are as fair as the lily in hue;
They play the piano with wonderful grace—
'Tis all the work they do.

Should you hear her talk of the "lower class,"
Of their "ignorance of propriety,"
Of "her family," and of "country girls,"
And her "horror of mixed society,"

You'd suppose that among her ancestors
She boasted a duke or an earl—
Her father was once a carpenter,
And her mother a factory girl.

They call her brilliant and beautiful,
Nor do I her charms deny;
But the farmer's daughter she scorns in her pride
Is fairer by far to my eye.

Mirth and innocent happiness
Out of her blue eyes shine;
Her hair is untutored by crimps of curls,
And she wears it by right divine.

Though her fingers can skillfully touch the keys
They can wash the dishes as well;
And her voice singing blithely, at work or at play,
Charms all with its musical spell.

No mother toils in the kitchen for her
While she on the sofa lolls,
Novel in hand or dressed in her best,
Receiving "her morning calls."

But a share in the heat and the burdens of life
She willingly, cheerfully takes;
And a dutiful love in her happy home,
A pleasure of labor makes.

And I think you will own, spite the verdict of those
Who live in fashions' gay whirl
That "only a farmer's daughter" means
"Only a sensible girl."

How to Handle Frightened Horses.

There are some good suggestions as to the management of frightened horses, in the following from the Ohio Farmer, especially about curing them by degrees of all fear of any object, and being calm and quiet yourself; but we should question the policy of giving loose rein when they shy at objects.

Almost invariably the damage done by frightened horses is directly traceable to injudicious management. In the first place the idea of forcing a horse to "get used" to something he is frightened at is wrong. If a horse is afraid of the cars or any other object, the only way to cure him of it is by degrees. Drive or hitch him at a safe distance from them, where he can see them, and then pay as little attention to him as possible. Don't make anything of the matter yourself, and he will gain confidence very rapidly. When your horse is frightened, never display any fear or nervousness yourself, and make the matter appear as light as possible. If you make a great demonstration about holding him, it is certain to magnify the cause in the mind of the horse. Never let your horse see you are afraid of him, nor try to cure his fears by force or rough treatment, for either course will be certain to increase his fear.

Be firm, calm and kind, and you will be astonished at your own success. Many horses are disagreeable drivers from the habit of shying at objects on the roadside or in passing another vehicle; this is in most cases a mere habit and can be quickly cured, simply by making the horse ashamed of his own fear. When a horse shys, if the circumstances will possibly admit of it, do not pay the least attention to it, do not pull him severely on the rein, and never hit him with the whip when past the object, but let the lines remain loose, and let him shy as far as he pleases without any apparent attention. No other course that we have tried will so quickly and effectually cure a horse of this disagreeable and sometimes dangerous habit. In case of a runaway, dangerous results can often be averted by quiet calmness, and seeking to restore your control by degrees, instead of by some sudden exertion. Never halloa, or by any means let the horse know you are afraid, although there may be ample cause for it. The horse deserves credit for more knowledge, affection and memory than is generally given to him.

Hints About Grass Lands.

The time is upon us when the farmer is "laying down his new fields," and he will naturally be solicitous in regard to the condition in which the fields have come through the winter, and the best mode of seeding—that the fields from which he receives the great staple crop of the farm may receive that care which the importance of the crop demands. And for the consideration of thoughtful farmers, we wish to make a few suggestions upon this matter now, more in the way of hints and suggestions to put into use, than by going into any elaborate and finished consideration of the subject.

And first as to old fields. There are several points of management that may be tried at little expense, which will greatly improve their condition; some of which need to be done at this season, and others at a later peroid of the year. We know many good farmers who make it a practice to sow grass seed on bare spots in their fields, and on places where the growth of grass appears scanty; and whose testimony is invariably in favor of such a plan. This is done early in spring, the quantity of seed being a matter of judgement rather than rule. The additional yield of grass the same season, even, is found to pay all the expense attending it. For fields that have suffered from drouth or are "bound out" as the term is—this course cannot be commended too strongly. Later in the season—just after haying—a good plan is to scarify the surface of old fields with a Nishwitz harrow, sow on quite liberally of grass seed, and top-dress. This on the whole, is a better, because a more thorough treatment for the restoration of old grass fields; but we would on no account have farmers neglect to sow grass seed on the thin places in fields this spring, because they intend to give them a more thorough treatment in the fall—they may not do so. There are however, many important reasons why the renovation of old mowing fields should take place soon after haying. Especially if a top dressing, (which is a matter of much importance) enters into the course it will be found of great benefit as it will supply direct nourishment to the roots of the grass at a time when they very much need it and it will also form sort of a mulch or protection to the grass suffering as it is from the scorching rays of the sun. Besides, that is the season when the natural grasses are self sown, and this is regarded by many as the true method of seeding and renovating grass lands. Fine old manure or a compost of muck, ashes, &c., is especially valuable as a top-dressing for grass. All farmers know that from the soft condition of the land it is not advisable to go upon fields in spring with a team for the purpose of drawing manure.

A word about seeding down grass fields. There are two or three points here which we deem of importance. In the first place, a mixture of grasses should be sown. This is important not only that all the ground may be occupied, but because a mixture of grasses is more relished by cattle than one or two kinds. The animal tissues require for their support numerous elements, and these elements are furnished in greater abundance, and better adapted for assimilation, by a mixture of distinct grasses, than by any single species. On a square foot of grass land, that had been heavily manured, over one thousand plants of different kinds of grasses were found growing, by actual count; while if one variety only, were growing on the same space, from 75 to 200 plants would be all it would contain, according to the nature of the variety growing. Farmers who are accustomed to seed only with herds grass and clover, should study statements like the above, and in seeding put on such a mixture, and in such quantity as their purses will allow. Timothy, red top, red and white clover and orchard grass, should by all means be used as a mixture in seeding. In regard to quantity of seed we may add that the rule given above is a very good one to follow; if you have money to spare, put on liberally of grass seed, but do not attempt to get along with less than half a bushel of timothy, ten pounds red and white clover, mixed, one peck red top and one peck orchard grass. Now a word in regard to the proper depth for covering seeds of the grasses. Experiments have demonstrated that at a depth of one fourth of an inch most kinds of grass seed never germinate. And although it is true that the best conditions of germination are dependent very much upon the weather and season, it should be a point with farmers not to harrow in or cover their grass seed too deep. Very likely much of the complaint about poor seed may come from this cause. Cover the grass seed with a fine toothed, light harrow, and if possible roll the land afterward. This presses the seed into soil, and prevents in a great measure the rapid drying of the surface, and leaves the field smooth and finished.

Agricultural Experiment Stations.

There seems good prospect that the agricultural experiment stations, which exist in such large numbers in Germany, and which have done so much for making definite the science of agriculture in that country and in England, will become numerous in our own country. Recently the Board of Agriculture of Connecticut, working in conjunction with the professors of Chemistry and Vegetable Physiology at the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College, and of Middletown University, have inaugurated the plan of conducting various agricultural experiments in different parts of the State, the results of which are to be carefully noted and at the proper time made public for the benefit of practical agriculture. But long before this plan was started, the several agricultural colleges in different parts of the country had really been engaged in just the work now entered upon by the Connecticut Board of Agriculture, and were in fact working as experiment stations. This is true of the results reached in the experiments that have been carried on at the Maine, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Michigan and Illinois State Agricultural College farms—and the published reports of these several institutions have contained facts of great value, brought out by many carefully conducted trials, giving the conclusions arrived at from the several experiments. At the farm of our State College, not a season has passed since it was put in operation but many experiments have been tried, and while a few of these experiments have been somewhat imperfectly carried out and the results of little consequence—others have been of great value, and the results have more than compensated for all that has been expended in this direction. The training which this plan gives to the pupils is of inestimable worth; and the results reached—as in the case of the feeding of cooked and uncooked food to pigs—such as place our State College of Agriculture in the very front rank among the few real successful experiment stations in this country. And this department cannot be too highly commended, as it is this which gives it distinctive importance as a training school for young farmers, and as an experiment station, to which our agriculturists may look for the testing of many disputed points in agricultural science and practice. We would suggest that a similar trial be made this season on the feeding of swine as has been carried out in 1872 and 1873, and that numerous other experiments of a different nature be instituted. It is the hammering away at one point for a series of years, that gives importance and weight to the results obtained.

ABOMINABLE, BUT NICE.—A writer in speaking of a certain concert says, Then came Strauss's "Beautiful Blue Danube" After Wagner and Schumann, it was amusing to see the audience wake up and bestir themselves indeed, that waltz so rendered would have given vitality to a graven image. A man, evidently a clergyman, who sat in front of us became quite frenzied and was heard to exclaim, reckless of consequences: "It's abominable, it is abominable, but it's beautiful! I declare it makes one feel like breaking every commandment in the decalogue right straight through!"

HOW A PROMISE HUNG BY A HAIR.—The core of a breach of promise suit lately decided in London was a moustache, and on a woman's lip It was what her lover particularly loved, and when she shaved it off it was Samson over again—her strength departed. The lover mittened her, she sued him, and was consoled with £200. But it was, maybe, bad for her after all, for it is not every day a man is found to love "women with beards" any more than Sir Hugh Evans did.

[From Labor of Love.]

"I am come a light into the world, that whoever believeth on Me should not abide in darkness."—John xii. 46.

Upon the marriage morning, the young bride left her father's house with a settled peace upon her fair young face, that this world's treasures, and the sweet gift of human affection can never be tow.

She was the younger of two daughters of a wealthy man: the elder had already married and was gone into that world of which she formed a contented member, while the younger had sought and found the portion of the children of the Kingdom.

The lavish expenditure, the crowds of careless guests, and the sinful wast by which her sister's wedding was remembered, had been the source of no little regret to one who had to stand among them while not of them, and witness the enjoyment that could be derived from worldly customs and extravagant follies by those so dear to her by her natural ties.

And now her own bridal drew near, and she saw the difficulties that would ensue. But difficulties are often stepping stones to a higher life, and I—G— knew the secret by which obstructions in the narrow path can be surmounted or removed. It kept her at the feet of the mighty Counselor in the hiding place from natural fears, and strengthened her to go forward contrary to the prejudice of a worldly family.

She pleaded with her parents to be allowed to go to her new home in a quiet, unostentatious manner. But there was no response. Perhaps these engrossing vanities tended to reconcile them to the loss of one who had been as a ministering spirit among them, though as yet they knew it not. Be it as it may, the suggestion was rejected, and the young disciple beheld the expensive preparation for her wedding with dismay, which sent her, a feeble woman, into the sanctuary of Him who holdeth the hearts of men in His hand. When she next in loving earnestness pleaded to be allowed a voice in the expenditure, all opposition was gone, and a considerable sum was placed at her disposal, even the same sum which had been appropriated for her sister's wedding feast, an amount which far exceeded her expectation.

The marriage day came; the simplicity of the quiet ceremony excited the contempt of some and the wonder of others. She boasted of no gorgeous ornaments; she had fairer adorning in a meek and quiet spirit. No lavish wardrobe excited the envy and admiration of the world,—robes from the most elaborate looms would have had no charms for one whose heart had been satisfied by a wedding garment that gold could not purchase; and though many scoffed, they were conscious of a power dwelling in this young follower of the meek and lowly Jesus.

And now she was gone. Reader, have you ever missed the form that has been forever near you, and is there now no longer—one whose unconscious influence, when near, lifted you to better and brighter things? Some one who has received in meek silence unmerited rebuke—one whose unselfish walk was a mute reproof, and excited dislike; one who lived to watch, and pray, and weep for you, when you neither watched, nor wept, nor prayed for yourself? Oh! there are deep lessons taught by vacant places.

Her home was now in another country, and the wide sea that rolled between her and the land of her birth would henceforth convey letters of love, little gifts of sweet affection; but never more would the ministering spirit of the fire side influence the now broken circle by her presence.

When the carriage which was to convey her and her husband to the port, rolled down the busy street of the city, few were aware how large a sum of money had been expended on the marriage feast; yet thoughts of the manner in which it had been spent now filled her heart, and that of her life's companion, with grateful joy.

A friend had stood in her name at the prison where debtors, many of her own townsmen, were confined for small debts. One by one the names were called, and the men went forth free!

And when they knew the secret of their freedom, the young bride was beyond the reach of their grateful thanks, but not beyond the blessing.

The memory of that marriage morning is fragrant still, though years have gone by, and children have risen up and called her blessed; it left an abiding impression, sweeter than the recounted wonders of a brilliant assembly, of graceful garments and embroidered hair, and pearls, and jewels, and costly array.

The bride gives out of her abundance; she leaves her father's house, but not to suffer and be put to death for the poor debtors; neither to suffer reproach and ignominy in their stead.

But what has the Son of Man done for you—you who are content with your prison and your prison garments and who cannot or will not believe the love of God to poor lost sinners?

Now, supposing one of these debtors should have said, "I do not know this young lady, I never saw her, I have no claim upon her, I never served her, and I have no way of repaying her; I do not comprehend such unheard-of generosity, and I do not believe in it." And so he remains still within his prison, because he refuses to go out free.

This is what You are doing. You are wasting your precious hours in arguing and controversy, instead of believing the simple truth spoken—"If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

Christ has paid your debt once and forever. Through His blood you have forgiveness of sins. If you believe this then you are free. God hath sent His Son, that "whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

This debtor might have said, "Oh, yes! I believe this stranger has paid my debt."

"Then why sit here and weep? If you really believed it you would go forth and return home, and eat of the wholesome food she has there provided for you. It is her wedding feast.

The man replies, "Yes I have heard she is a very charitable person; but I thought she would not pay the debts of those who owed so much as I did. It also struck me that I did not feel glad that my debt was paid, and therefore that, perhaps, I owed it still; so I sat down again as miserable as before."

But in that prison was a man who owed more than all the rest; and when they showed him the written word of freedom, he did not wait to argue about it, but ran with all speed to assure himself by the use of his limbs that it was all true as he believed. He enters the house, and sees his happy wife; he sits at the table where food has been spread for him through the kindness of his unknown benefactress. He puts on the robe the same kind friend has prepared for him, and then listens with joy and gladness to one who knows every particular of this generous transaction; and as he listens he weeps with joy for others as for himself; for the young lady, without distinction of creed or character, offers liberty, not only to himself, but to his poor companions in misery.

One enters to disturb the peace of the freed man.

"What! you out of prison? I thought you were penniless, and your wife a beggar."

"All that you say is true; I had not a shilling to discharge the debt."

The visitor is a former creditor, and an unjust man, and he replies, "You have no right to be free."

Ah! the free man will not spend his time in arguing; he shows him the written discharge.

"Read: ('The blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin.') I am free, and I will prove it by working, and, if needs be, by crying to my fellow-partners of misery to come out of the dark prison-house, and lift up their heads in the clear light of day."

This poor man could not see the kind benefactress, the carriage had conveyed her beyond his sight; but he knew her by her work. He does not doubt her. She did not go to him that he might see her, and hear her say, "That man who owes so much I will free." The poor debtor believes, though he did not see her do it; he believes "for the very work's sake;" he believes because he is free—free to work; free to run; free to write to this kind stranger, and pour out his loving thanks, that he is now a happy man, and she has made him so!

What more can the Son of Man do for you than He has done? Believe! Come out of your dreary prison of sin, and feel the air of heaven upon your downcast brow. Read the sweet discharge of every debt in the word of Him who cannot lie: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you," and his commandment is not grievous.

THE AGASSIZ MEMORIAL.

TEACHERS' AND PUBILS' FUND

Boston, March 10, 1874.

Louis Agassiz, Teacher. This was the heading of his simple will; this was his chosen title; and it is well known throughout this country, and in other lands, how much he has done to raise the dignity of the profession, and to improve its methods. His friends, the friends of education, propose to raise a memorial to him, by placing upon a staong and enduring basis the work to which he devoted his life, the Museum of Comparative Zoology, which is at once a collection of natural objects, rivaling the most celebrated collections of the Old World, and a school open to all the teachers of the land.

It is proposed that the teachers and pupils of the whole country take part in this memorial, and that on the birthday of Agassiz, the 28th day of May, 1874, they shall each contribute something however small, to the Teachers' and Pupils' Memorial Fund, in honor of Louis Agassiz; the fund to be kept separate, and the income to be applied to the expenses of the Museum.

The Gem Microscope.

The Gem Microscope is truly an optical wonder. It reveals thousands of unseen wonders and curiosities of God's minute creation; the small worlds teeming with animal life, the little things of nature with which we are surrounded, but which are invisible to the naked eye, the thousand and one curiosities and minute objects with many of which we are familiar, because we have read or heard of them, but which to the unaided vision have remained a sealed book, are brought within the realizing reach of our sight and understanding by the use of the Gem and many wonders entirely new to us are also brought to sight by its use. No article for the same price has ever been offered to the public which combines the essential points of valuable instruction and entertaining refined amusement to so great an extent as this instrument; every family has only to appreciate its merits to become its possessor. It is so low-priced that everybody can have one, and so simple a child can use it. Parents should provide their children with this valuable instructor. This Microscope possesses the great advantage of being used by lamp-light as well as by daylight, and thus affords entertainment after the occupations of the day are laid aside. It is safely mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price ($1.50) to any address by The Beverly Company, 973 Wabash Ave., Chicago. See their advertisement elsewhere.

The Photograph Family Record.

The Photograph Family Record is a work that should find a place in every home in the land. It is an elegant Oil Chromo, Photograph Album and Family Record combined, of the highest finish and of most tasteful design. The subject is allegorical in its nature, there are the scenes representing the four principle periods of life, namely, childhood, youth, manhood and old age; these scenes are ingeniously and prettily grouped together and are surrounded by a handsome frame work of vine, gold and flowers, in which there are eight oval openings or spaces of the proper size for the insertion of ordinary photographs. Under these openings are blank spaces for the autographs, dates of birth, etc., of those whose pictures are intended to be placed above. It is a lovely home adornment and a pleasant reminder of the loved ones living and dead. All who have seen it express both pleasure and satisfaction at its beauty and originality of design. The grouping of its figures and the scenery surrounding them are life like and natural. It must be seen to be fully appreciated and understood. Its low price ($1.50) places it within the reach of all. It is mailed, post paid, to any address on receipt of price, by the Beverly Co., 978 Wabash Ave. Chicago. See their advertisement in another column.

——The preparations for decorating Bellefonte when the Knights Templar come, are steadily progressing. An interesting rivalry is being manifested in the different wards as to which will be able to make the finest display.

——A drunken man fell off the embankment from Water street into Spring creek on Friday last, and fortunately was sufficiently injured to be sobered immediately. Some men riding by in a wagon came to his relief and took him home.

——About May 15th Mr. Montgomery expects to open a fine assortment of LADIES' KID AND CASTOR GAUNTLETS—together with a stock of Gents Gloves, which are now being made at the factory—an assortment of Ladies' Silk Handkerchiefs also in stock.

——The International Scripture Lesson, for next Sabbath is upon the Ancient Jewish Tabernacle and its Furniture. A set of models representing these interesting objects, prepared by Mr. Crittenden, can be seen in the show window of James Welch & Co's Book Store.

——Major R. C. Cheesman, our well known Notary Public, since he has opened his handsome tobacco store in the First National Bank building, has been continually adding to his stock until, at present, his shelves contain all the best brands of cigars and tobacco in the market. All the old smokers say there is no place like Cheesman's.

——An unknown individual—an old man, was accosted on Nittany mountain, near the summit, on last Sunday night, by two unknown men who knocked him down with a club and robbed him of $7.50, and a silver watch. He came to this place on Monday morning and gave a clear account of the assault, but could give nothing definite as to who the villians were.

——Some men go out of this world with a heavy burden of unexpiated sins on their shoulders. Chief among these unpardoned wretches is the man who launches an anonymous maxim, suffering the waif to wander fatherless through the world, regardless of the mischief the little outcast may do when he has grown tough and strong. We are thinking now of the man who devised that ingenious and fallacious old saw, "Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day." If it had no other ground for offense, the domineering, dogmatic manner in which it comes at you would be sufficient to justify a blow between the eyes. The philosopher who introduced it was apparently never a man of resources, but a man whose mind and methods were cast iron. He never realized what a great many successful men have discovered since his day, that very often the most effective method of treatment lies, not in procrastination, but in judicious postponement, and that frequently the wisest thing to do with a difficult and troublesome subject is to do nothing. The maker of this proverb was a man of details but never of a comprehensive grasp: and his boat, we may be sure, was swamped in a foaming sea of petty trivialities, while the harbor of his hopes was never reached. He had no concentration and the constant over-estimating of his abilities left him at the end of every day in a tangle of unfinished tasks, because he had not the self-reliance to commit to-morrow what were of right to-morro 's labors. But we will pity rather than condemn him, since if his own experience did not teach his mistake, he was sufficiently punished by his vain and self-toturing efforts to carry out a pernicious policy.

——During a pleasant afternoon of last week, we went, in company with a friend, to repair and plant some flowers on a grave in the cemetery. We noticed there a number of persons, mostly ladies, busily engaged in removing coverings from rose bushes and otherwise beautifying some of the enclosures.—Evergreens and shrubbery have been profusely planted in many of the lots by affectionate hands. The fence and some of the walks need repairing. This should be done immediately, because every here and there we saw the traces of pigs that have rooted up the sod. As Spring advances and the genial influences of the season become more perceptible, the cemetery will assume a lovely appearance. When the trees are in leaf and the flowers in bloom, it will be a scene of rare beauty. The sacred grounds, even at this early season, present a very handsome and attractive appearance and are frequently visited by numbers of persons who have friends interred there. If the trustees will continue to make improvements, in a few more years, the Bellefonte Cemetery will be a charming spot, endeared to all hearts.

——Hon. Wm. Phillips, late president of the Allegheny valley Railroad, and one of the principal Directors of the Tyrone, Centre and Lewisburg Rail road, died at his home in Pittsburgh, on Monday 13th inst. The funeral took place in Thursday the 16th, and was one of the most solemn and imposing demonstrations that ever took place in that city. Mr. Phillips was considered one of the very best men in Pittsburgh. It was through his exertions that the Allegheny valley Rail Road was completed as early as it was—and also the Bennett Branch lowgrade rail road from Driftwood on the Philadelphia and Erie railroad to Red bank on the Allegheny valley railroad, the last rail in the completion of which, was laid a few days ago. He owned the Shorb interest in the firm of Lyon, Shorb & Co. He was a bachelor about 60 years of age, worth two millions of dollars. He died without a will. A brother and sister survive him who will inherit his estate.

——On last Friday evening Wm. McClellan, Jr. was engaged in fishing in the old canal dam near the Thomas Ware House. He stood upon the board that lays across the breast when he noticed a little girl about seven or eight years of age pass down into the pool below which is four or five feet deep. Mr. McClellan at once realized the situation and sprang into the water and rescued her from what in a few moments would have been a premature watery grave. He laid her on his knee, when the water gushed from her mouth and nose, after which he took her to her home on Lamb street. He did not learn the little girl's name nor did he hear how she got into the stream. But Mr. McClellan's presence of mind is commendable and we are now glad to chronicle that the little girl still lives through his timely assistance.

——The Reporter says: On Sunday night, 12th, about twelve dollars worth of tobacco was stolen from the cellar of J. K. Miller's drugstore. The thief gained an entrance through a back window, which led to the cellar. The noise was heard by people living in the same building, but suspicioned nothing, as they supposed it to be one of the firm.

——Munroe Armor, the ex-milkman, was opposed to cremation.

——The "Nittany mountain Antidote," by Doctor Fisher, will blot out cancer.

——Millheim is determined to have a brass band. Otherwise the neighborhood is quite healthy.

——The Building & Loan Association sold money last Saturday evening, at a premium of 34¾ per cent.

——The public schools of this place will give an entertainment in the Court House on the evening of May 11th.

——Centre Hall has another preacher who pursues two great callings—preaching the gospel and selling stencil plates.

——Mr. Jacob Kepler, of Ferguson twp., died, a few days since of apoplexy. He was seventy-four years of age.

——The Altoona Silver Cornet Band, one of the best in the State, has been engaged by Constans Commandery for the grand encampment which commences May 12th.

——Sometimes fortune frowns upon us and we are deprived of many coveted pleasures. In other words, we missed the speech made the other evening to the brass band by Major Wilson.

——Robert Robinson, Sr., living near Port Matilda, had his collar bone broken and was otherwise injured by the falling of an old house in which he was at work, on last Thursday week.

——Never, within their history, has the Glass Works done such a thriving business as at the present time. The right men have finally gotten hold of the concern, and are making glass and money rapidly.

——James Welch & Co. have made such arrangement with the Publishers that they are enabled to supply the LATEST MUSIC at short notice and at PUBLISHER'S PRICES. Orders solicited and carefully filled.

——A meeting of all the ladies interested in the work of decorating the town for the Knights Templar meeting, is called for to-morrow (Thursday) evening, in the Masonic Hall. We hope the ladies generally will attend.

——Ferguson says the happy time is coming when the honest granger will plow his fields and catch the point of his plow on a stone, and tumble over the handle and get up and swear at the railroad monopolies and middle men.

——For Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Milk Crust, Teething humors, COSMOLINE is the safest and best remedy you can use. It is bland and soothing, and safer than the patent ointments, all of which contain more or less mercury and poisonous drugs.

——A good half day's work was that of a maternal animal of the hog species who, with a few of her offspring, commenced on the nicely sodded walk around the big spring, and in the above named period of time, completely demolished that ornamental work which took two men three days to complete and cost the borough $15.

——The Watchman very plainly informs the public that our language was not in strict accordance with the principles of veracity, when we said that Judge Orvis was somewhat negligent in his personnel; but, then we didn't know what a difference it makes on a man's appearance to be made a Judge—entering the ministry is nothing compared to it.

——A little boy on Bishop street "set" a hen on Easter Monday and the hen had done her duty faithfully every hour until yesterday when the disappointed lad, in his anxiety to see why the chicks were not forth-coming, broke some of the eggs and found that they had been hard boiled for Easter. He has lost his interest in the poultry business, but just imagine the disappointment of the hen.

——We have read much in our exchanges in regard to cremation, but some "furriner" has improved on the thing already. He has discovered a liquid that will petrify any body in about five years. All that is required is the ordinance of immersion. Anything nicer can hardly be imagined. As fast as the members of a family die they can be petrified and used as statue ornaments in the front yard.

——A benevolent sewing society of this place, a short time since, took pity upon a poor widower, living near the planing mill, who had seven small, helpless children. The society made new clothes for the little ones, and gave the father some money to buy food until he could get work; instead of which, he bought a new silk hat, a turkey and some oysters, and married a widow with four other little cherubs.

——After an extensive tour through the Southern and Western States, Hon. Andrew G. Curtin and lady arrived at home last week. A sojourn in Florida, of almost two months has improved very beneficial to the health of both the Governor and his wife, neither of whom have enjoyed the best of health since their return from Russia. We, in common with everybody in the county, join in expressing the hope that they may continue in good health for many years to come.

——A well known christian gentleman and philanthropist takes up the cudgel on the cow nuisance and expresses his sentiments in the following poetic manner:

A paper has just been presented to me for signature, containing a statement of a Borrough grievance, and earnestly beseeching the honorable city fathers to interpose, and by statute or ordinance, peremptorily to abate the nuisance. A cow is a domestic animal—gentle and kind, submitting to the process of depletion in a way quite remarkable, and exhibiting under the stinging tortures of flies in August, a patience most rare. There are sermons in stones, running brooks, and, so is there a sermon here for our fretting, "touch me not" humanity. Under any cow provocation, no man, or woman either, should loose temper. Think of "strawberries smothered in cream," and then gently step aside. Thanks to a good old custom of our fore fathers, their now representatives in this town, have had most frequent opportunity for the study of that part of natural history descriptive of the cow. And how much of gentleness, long-suffering and forbearance have we not learned from this study. To this circumstance, more than to any other, may be referred the urbanity of manner for which the Bellefonte citizen is so distinguished. But in return for these advantages, let us not forget to be grateful. Therefore, in the petition, the fathers are urged to adopt such measures as will best protect our cows from the daily abuse to which they are exposed as they drag their slow lengths along pavement and alley. Our town is full of broken horned, crippled, and mutilated cows, a sad sight indeed! And yet how patient under kicks and blows! How they do return good for evil. In view of the situation I will sign the petititon, and so ought every man who claims to be a philanthropist. And if the city fathers cannot respond favorably to this request, and for the cows' "own good," restrain them of their liberty, could they not, in these hard times, when so many persons are seeking employment, appoint say one man to four cows, directing the force, with baskets and shovels, to follow in the wake of this vagrant chattel, and carefully collect and save the futilizing material, that we may see it in form more attractive in the deep green lawn, or the heightened colors of the beautiful rose. If on the other hand, the city fathers, in their wisdom or fears, just as you please, with flat negation receive the appeal, would it not be better to educate the cow in a higher civilization? Let the Borrough fathers provide earth closets, one for every street and alley corner, and these tenders (one to four cows, as above indicated) can in a few months so train this docile and observant quadruped, that the particular nuisance will entirely disappear in the practical knowledge of a higher refinement.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN.—In your issue of last week we noticed an article favoring the establishment of a market in Bellefonte. Having lived for many years, before removing to this place, in a town where we had a regular market, I am confident that, if the plan you propose were carried out, it would be a great help to the town besides being a convenience that every housekeeper would appreciate. A market, instead of proving detrimental to our town merchants would eventually be a decided advantage to them. This is the verdict every town renders that has tried it. Bellefonte contributed liberally to the erection of car works and I venture that a good market, properly established and managed, would do fully as much for the town, and it would not require nearly such a large contribution.

J. W.

Millheim Grange, organized April 14th by Deputy Frank Porter, assisted by F. J. Arney of Progress Grange, Master and Secretary of Spring Mills Grange and Leonard Rhone, Deputy for this county. The following were elected officers:

Master	Christian Alexander.
Overseer	Franklin Bowersox.
Lecturer	Thom. G. Erhard.
Steward	Jacob Kerstetter.
Assistant Steward	Emanual Kerstetter.
Chaplain	Elias Kreamer.
Treasurer	Andrew Stover.
Secretary	D. L. Zerby.
Gate-Keeper	John Long.
Ceres	Margaret Keen.
Pomona	Harriet Kerstetter.
Flora	Fannie Kreamer.
Lady Assistant Steward	M. E. Stover.

Persons desiring information to organize Granges will apply to Leonard Rhone, Centre Hall, Centre Co., Pa. who has been appointed deputy for this county.

——The following circular has been addressed to our citizens by Constans Commandery:

The Grand Commandery of Knights Templar, of Pennsylvania, will hold their Annual Conclave in this place, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 12th, 13th, and 14th of May next As this is an occasion that may never again be witnessed in Bellefonte, the citizens of the town, generally, are invited to join in extending a hearty welcome to the Sir Knights who may honor us with their presence, and aid in so decorating and beautifying our town as to give it the appearance of a grand holiday occasion. In view of this, you are respectfully requested to decorate your house or business place with flags and evergreen, in such a manner as will be appropriate to so grand an event. COMMITTEE.

——The Center County Sabbath School Association will hold its next annual convention at Spring Mills, commencing on Tuesday, June the 2nd, and closing on the following Wednesday evening.

Rev. R. P. H. Fletcher, of Lock Haven will preach the opening sermon on Tuesday evening. A sermon will also be delivered on Wednesday evening by Rev. Hiram King, of Bellefonte.

—— Our young legal friend Love, is recovering and will return home about the first of May.

——The subscriptions to the Centennial Exhibition now amount to $4,110,000; to the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN two thousand.

——A special train passed up the Bald Eagle road on Sunday about noon, which contained several hundred raftmen, the majority of whom were not in condition to attend church.

——Hundreds of raftmen are daily passing through Bellefonte on the trains homeward bound. From their conduct at the depot, we should think a few missionaries were needed in the lumber districts.

——ATTENTION.—All honorably discharged soldiers of Bellefonte and vicinity, are requested to meet at the Council room in Humes new block, next Thursday evening April the 23rd at half past seven sharp. Business of importance is to come before the meeting.

Per Order of COMMITTEE.

——We are informed that the posts to which the pail fence around the Thomas residence is attached, are of red cedar, and were first planted there in 1796. They look to be about as sound as when first put there. Good posts that have been holding up a fence for 78 years, are not common in this vicinity, and we think a few of them should be exhibited at the next Fair of our Agricultural Society.

——Mr. H. C. Farwell, of this place, who has invented several useful contrivances has recently completed a simple device for utilizing the surplus heat from an ordinary stove for warming an upper story. The arrangement consists of a large pipe, surrounding the stove-pipe and connected with the stove. This is perforated at the bottom and thus creates a current of hot air which passes through a register to the room above.—It has cheapness and effectiveness to recommend it.—Journal.

——Daniel Snyder, aged about 13 years son of Mrs. Rosanna Snyder of Mifflinburg, Pa., left the Womelsdorf (Berks Co.) Orphans' School some time during the holidays, without the permission or knowledge of those in charge of said school. Where he is, whether living or dead, is unknown to his poor grief-stricken mother would give all she possesses to know his whereabouts. Any one who can furnish information that will lead to his discovery, will confer a very great favor by addressing this almost heart-broken widow—Mrs. Rosanna Snyder, Mifflinburg, Union Co., Pa. (Exchanges, please copy.)

——Notwithstanding the apparent depression in business and the continued cry of hard times, the Pennsylvania Railroad is unable to furnish cars promptly to accommodate the shippers who do business on their road. Box cars are so scarce here, that shippers are very much annoyed and lose money in consequence. This is a state of things that should not exist, and the Railroad company would continue promoting their own interests, as well as all Pennsylvanians, by furnishing cars to local shippers in preference to through freight brought from the far West.

——A fight occurred on the pike, beyond Judge Hosterman's on last Friday, 10th, between John Gwinn, of Lewistown, and Dutch Charley Smith. They had a slight fuss between them in the hotel, at the Old Fort, but were separated before any injury could be inflicted on their persons, and Charley was sent off on his way to Potters Bank, when Gwinn and Joe Blymyer started in pursuit, and met him at the above place. Gwinn jumped from his buggy, and Charley finding he was too much for him, drew his knife, stabbing him in the right side, and inflicting a serious gash, about 4 inches long in his thigh. When Joe Blymyer saw he used a knife, he sprung from his buggy and dealt Charley a severe blow across the forehead, causing him to drop his knife. Charley came to town and was badly used up. Gwinn's wounds are not supposed to be fatal. A warrant was issued for the arrest of Blymyer and Gwinn.—Reporter.

——Rev. Yates Hickey, Representative of a society whose object is to protect society against the circulation of licentious literature, visited this place last week and was the guest of Rev. W. T. Wylie. He occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on Sabbath evening and in the brief time allotted to him made a complete and exhaustive argument against the cause of pernicious literature. His sermon, or lecture rather, occupied a full hour and we were sorry when he stopped. He evidently is a man of much ability and has taken upon himself, as his mission for life, to assist in bearing back the great tide of obscene and ruinous literature that is flooding this country. He has already spent sixteen years of his life in the work. On some of the railroads of the country, the society of which he is such an able and enthusiastic member, has formed associations composed of news boys who have resolved to sell nothing on the trains but moral and healthful literature. This is accomplishing something, but we think every railroad company should forbid the evil without allowing societies to take the matter in hand.

——The Philipsburg editor has been taken in by a business directory man and speaks of the affair as follows:

He registered his name as M. C. Falcs ostensibly his business was that of a canvasser for bussiness directories. He stayed about a week and suddenly took his departure and all the money he could collect from business men, but didn't take the directories we had been at some expense to print for him, and forgot to adjust a little bill at his hotel. His plan is to enter a place, call on the business men and solicit their card to be printed with others on board and hung up in the railway depots and post offices within a certain circuit. If he gets enough cards to fill a sheet, well and good, if not he supplies the cards of those who never authorized their insertion and thus the printer is always furnished work enough. After the directories are printed he only wants four or five to get them framed to leave with the advertisers, and if the printer is "flat" enough to let him have them he goes to the advertisers' places of business tacks one upon the wall in a great flurry, presents his receipt and they pay him without ever inquiring if his part of the contract to distribute them is fulfilled, and then he doesn't wait for the second train of cars.

The printer does not suppose it possible for him to collect from fourteen or fifteen advertisers with but half a dozen directories in his possession, as each one is to receive a directory, and he is thus "taken in" for the sharper collects from those that ordered their cards and the printer can't collect from those who did not. We never sympathize very much with people who were gulled by strangers and don't ask for any when we are "beaten," but we publish the scamp in order to warn others if possible. He is a very tall man about thirty-five years of age, sandy complexion, and heavy sandy moustache, prominent features, very talkative, and tolerably well dressed; does not make a very good impression, is likely to be too voluble. You would feel suspicious, as we did, if you talked with him much, and would be defrauded, as we were, if you thought you were giving him no advantage, just as we did.

——Our judicial dignitary, Judge Orvis, appeared on the street, the day before our last paper was published, in a bran new suit of clothes, his feet encased in a pair of blacked boots, and the whole covered with a shiny kind of hat. He stood the congratulations of his friends right well, but it took quite too much time for him to explain how he became possessed of so many new dry goods at one time. As we are fully satisfied that he came by them honestly, it is not worth while for us to repeat the history here. Judge Orvis held his first court in Lock Haven, last Friday, and we learn that he sat on the bench with more grace and dignity than his new clothes sat on him.

——A large building belonging to Messrs Hartman and Lamy, was almost destroyed by fire on Thursday evening last, which sets the Millheimers to thinking about a fire company.

——The Berichter proposes the following conundrum:

"Is the Rail Road dead or asleep?"
Answer, George F. Miller.

——Millhiem has donated about two hundred and seventy-five dollars to the new brass band.

MARRIED

On the 16th inst., at the residence of the bride, in Pine Grove, by Rev. M. G. Earhart, Mr. Jacob M. Musser and Miss Sallie E. Sample, both of Pine Grove Mills.

Centaur Liniment

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lockjaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. They are counter-irritant, all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. The recipe is published around each bottle. They sell as no articles ever before sold, and they sell because they do just what they pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—these liniments are worth your attention. No family should be without them. "White wrapper for family use;" Yellow wrapper for animals. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles $1 00. J. B. ROSE & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.
